water has at last given place to the reign of sunshine. A very pleasant change, to say the least. Of the first we have had enough and to spare to insure bountiful crops and general prosperity throughout the land, but of the latter we cannot get enough. Perpetual sunshine, the glory of Southern California, has come to stay, and with it comes an increasing demand for Spring goods, and never before during the existence of this house have we been so well able to cater to that demand. Our stock is the most complete, showing all the decided novelties of the season, all the new spring shades in staple weaves. Our prices are right, no exorbitant profits asked. Our goods are bought right, and goods bought right are half sold. Our low prices do the rest.

THE ARMY BILL

Caprivi Battling With a Hostile Majority.

The Chancellor's Resolute Rejection of Compromise Proposals.

The Report of the Committees Will Be Submitted After Easter.

It is Estimated the Reichstag Will Be Dissolved at the End of April—
The Outlook Perplexing—
Foreign Notes

By Telegram to The Times.

BERLIN, March 18.—[By Cable and Associated Press.] Before the final vote is taken on the Army Bill in the Committee of the Left the government is brought face to face with a definite hostile majority. Von Caprivi had conferences with Huehne, Rickert, Benigsdorf and Lieber, chiefs of the parties represented on the committee. The negotiations left the government and the committee more hostile than ever toward each other. Only the Conservative and Free Conservative members of the committee supported the bill. The Chancellor gave a resolute rejection to Benigsdorf's compromise proposals, though they largely conceded the government's demands, as he did to the proposals of Lieber, which conceded nothing. The report of the committee will be submitted to the Reichstag after Easter. Every indication now points to the Reichstag supporting the committee.

The determined attitude of the Chancellor proves that Emperor William has resolved to take an extra step. It is now expected that the Reichstag will be dissolved at the end of April. The closing speeches in the committee had a pronounced election character. The National Liberals were in opposition at the general election, and Benigsdorf, who is now provisional president of Hanover, would like to resign his post. But the question is, is dissolution inevitable? The Emperor must first obtain assent of the Bundesrat, or federal council of Bavarian and Saxon members, which is known to be absolutely hostile to an appeal to the country, preferring the withdrawal of the Army Bill. If the Bundesrat refuses the Emperor's demand for dissolution of the Reichstag Von Caprivi must resign. If the dissolution occurs, the outlook for all parties is perplexing. Von Caprivi's position is abandoned. Amid the complications of an electoral contest some of the Nationals would oppose while others would support the government. Some of the Conservatives, in the event of an appeal to the country, will ask for the support of electors mainly on an anti-socialist platform. Others will stand as purely government candidates. The Freisinnige, Center and Socialist parties, with clearly defined platforms, would probably reappear in Reichstag so reinforced as to compel the Emperor to yield or raise the momentous contest between the monarch and Parliament.

THE DEAD STATESMAN.

It is Expected That the Government Will Propose a State Funeral.

PARIS, March 18.—[By Cable and Associated Press.] The room in which Jules Ferry died has been transformed into a mortuary and hung with draperies worked with silver. The public in the meantime is not allowed to view the remains. It is expected the government will propose a state funeral, in which case the body will be removed to the Luxembourg. The will directs that the remains be buried at Fouchault, near the place where M. Ferry resided during his retirement from public life.

M. Ribot took the news of M. Ferry's death to the Chamber of Deputies today the sum of £30,000 for the expense of Ferry's funeral. The chamber also decided to adjourn over Wednesday, the day of the funeral.

In the Senate, Charles Merlie, vice-president, delivered a long and eloquent eulogy on the dead statesman to which the Senators listened with deep emotion. The Senate adopted the appropriation for the funeral and then adjourned out of respect to the memory of their late president.

The funeral will be celebrated with great solemnity. The entire garrison of Paris will attend as a military escort, and Premier Ribot will deliver the funeral oration as the representative of the government.

M. Constans, former Minister of the Interior, is spoken of for the office of president of the Senate as successor to M. Ferry.

Republican newspapers appeared today bordered in black. Newspapers of all shades of opinion concede him a place in the first rank for work done in behalf of the republic.

PANAMA AFFAIRS.

A Sensation Created in Paris by a Radical Newspaper.

PARIS, March 18.—[By Cable and Associated Press.] Le Rappel, a radical journal, created a sensation by publishing a statement to the effect that the liquidator of the estate of Baron Reinach had told the Panama investigating committee that he has discovered a document which gives names and dates of various Panama payments, including one of £50,000 to Crispi, the former Prime Minister of Italy.

In the trial of Charles de Lesseps and associates today, Waldeck Rousseau made an eloquent appeal to the jury for mercy for his client Balbut. Darnet, in his argument in behalf of Deputy Sans-Leroy, sought to sustain the evidence of Sans-Leroy that at the time he deposited the amount alleged to have been given to him as a bribe he was simply investing his wife's dowry.

ROME, March 18.—It is stated that Signor Crispi acted in Italy for Baron de Reinach's firm from 1886 until his accession to power, and Baron de Reinach in 1891 begged Crispi to resume his position, and at the same time paid Crispi the arrears of fees due for former services.

ANOTHER BOMB.

Attempt to Blow Up the Headquarters of a Military Organization in Rome.

ROME, March 18.—[By Cable and Associated Press.] Yesterday's attempt to blow up the Ancina Mattei Palace, occupied by United States Minister Porter, was followed today by a like attempt at the Palazzo Altieri, the headquarters of the Guards Nobili, a military organization which is the Pope's bodyguard at all great religious functions. The dynamite bomb was encased in plaster of paris with a burning fuse, and was discovered by a passing boy who stamped out the fuse with his feet, and notified the police. It is believed these outrages are the work of Anarchists in revenge for the recent arrest of several of their number.

JUSTICE.

Montana's Silver Statute Successfully Cast Yesterday.

Sixteen Hundred Pounds of Silver Used in the Operation—How the Molding Was Done—Cost of the Statue.

By Telegram to The Times.

CHICAGO, March 18.—[By the Associated Press.] In the presence of a distinguished company Montana's silver statue of Justice was successfully cast yesterday. Sixteen hundred pounds of sterling silver were used in the operation. For the past six weeks half a dozen of the most expert founders have been engaged in preparing for the event. A mould which would reproduce the plaster model made by Sculptor Park was made from French clay and hardened by baking. It was then placed in a pit and prepared for today's event. Among those present were President Palmer of the National Commission, President Hignotham of the Chicago directory, Chief Clerk of the mining department and Judge Hickford of Montana, executive commissioner. One hour after the molten metal was poured into the mould the latter was removed, and the statue, which is indeed a thing of beauty, revealed. In the white, shining metal, the majestic proportions of Park's model is seen to the greatest possible advantage. The total cost of the statue is stated to be $70,000. Not only is the statue the exact reproduction of the figure of Miss Kehan, but the features are her's also. The height of the statue is five feet ten inches, and it will stand upon a silver globe two feet in diameter. The statue will remain in the vault of the Safe Deposit Company until the time comes for placing it in Jackson Park.

DISASTROUS EMPLOYEES.

The Lake Shore Becoming Involved in the Ann Arbor Strike.

TOLEDO (O.), March 18.—[By the Associated Press.] The Lake Shore road is becoming involved in the strike on the Toledo, Ann Arbor and Northern Michigan road. Five of its employees have already quit, and a general strike is anticipated. Judge Ricks this afternoon issued an order commanding Chief Arthur to raise the boycott against the Ann Arbor road. The Lake Shore Railroad filed a complaint this afternoon in the United States Court against several of its employees, charging them with violation of the order issued by Judge Ricks at Cleveland a week ago. Three employees were subsequently arrested while taking part in a secret meeting of the strikers, and committed for trial on Monday afternoon. Warrants are out for two more engineers and three firemen. This evening Judge Ricks granted an injunction restraining all employees of the Wheeling and Lake Erie Railroad from refusing to handle Ann Arbor freight, and from obeying orders that may be issued by the Brotherhood.

DEMANDS REFUSED.

SAN ANTONIO (Tex.), March 18.—Charles P. Peck, assistant general manager of the San Antonio and Aransas Pass road, refused to accede to the demands of the brakemen's Grievance Committee or accept a new set of articles which the committee submitted for consideration. S. W. Williams, Grand Master of the Order of Railway Trainmen, is expected tomorrow. He will take the matter up with the officers of the company, and if the grievance is not satisfactorily settled, a strike will be declared.

THREATENED STRIKE.

POTTSVILLE (Pa.), March 18.—The Reading Company's engraving machinists and engineers at different dispatching points hereabouts with orders to hold themselves in readiness to be forwarded on short notice to the New York and New England road, where a strike of the employees is in contemplation.

Judge Jackson's Successor.

NASHVILLE (Tenn.), March 18.—In the Senate today the resolution indorsing Chief Justice Horace H. Lurton for appointment to the vacancy made by the resignation of Judge Jackson, was unanimously adopted. Every Democrat and Republican voted for it.

Killed in a Fight.

KNOXVILLE (Tenn.), March 18.—Sheriff Rutherford of Anderson county was killed in a free fight at Caryville last night. Three others were mortally wounded. Rutherford had a man under arrest, whose friends tried to rescue him, and a fight resulted.

The Boundary Line.

SAN DIEGO, March 18.—Lieut. D. D. Gaillard, of the United States Corps of Engineers, and Lieut. W. Q. Jackson, of the Twenty-fourth Infantry, have reached this city, having ridden across the desert from Yuma on a reconnaissance of the boundary line between Yuma and the Pacific.

"DEPARTURES"

The President has Some New Ones in Stock.

He Will Spring Them on Senators and Representatives.

Cleveland Will Be His Own Boss and Run His Own Shop.

The Treasury Department Well Supplied With Gold—Applicants for Office from California—The Naval Review.

By Telegram to The Times.

WASHINGTON, March 18.—[Special.] President Cleveland is likely to stir up a big row in the happy Democratic family before many weeks roll by, on account of his numerous "new departures." His latest is his announced intention of ignoring, in a great degree, the recommendations of office from Senators and Representatives. He now has a wide personal and political acquaintance among the leading Democrats, and is to be much more independent than he was eight years ago. Indorsements for district attorneys, marshals and postmasters from State officers or private citizens whom he knows will have as much weight with him as those from Senators and Representatives. He does not believe these officials have any vested, acquired or divine right to decide who is or is not fit for office, and he will be President himself.

Californians have filed papers at the Treasury Department, within the past twenty-four hours, for places as follows: W. C. Wilson, Collector of the Northern District; M. F. Tarpey, Surveyor of the Port of San Francisco; P. O. Hundley of Oroville, Superintendent of the Mint at San Francisco; E. P. Rowe of San Francisco, Collector of the First District; Sam Brandhart of San Francisco, Appraiser; Capt. G. W. Jenks of Alameda and William McGwin of San Francisco, Shipping Commissioners.

Capt. and Mrs. William H. Slater, father and mother of Mrs. Horace G. Jacobs of Los Angeles, celebrated their golden wedding today in this city. Capt. Slater is a prominent and wealthy banker here, where he has resided since the war.

A COSTLY DANCE.

The Pension Bureau's Interruption by the Inaugural Ball.

WASHINGTON, March 18.—[By the Associated Press.] One of the last official acts of Gen. A. W. Ram, late Commissioner of Pensions, was to write a letter to Secretary Smith, calling his attention to the serious interruption to work in the Pension Bureau, and loss to the Government by the use of the Pension Building for inaugural balls. The Commissioner said: "I carefully estimated the lost time as a result of this use of the building, and decided it was not less than eight full days for the entire official force, amounting to $64,000. While it is true that the Pension office building is the only house in Washington well adapted to the accommodation of such an assemblage, it seems to me such disturbance of public business as a result of such use would hereafter cause the honorable Secretary of the Interior to decline the use of the building for such purposes."

WASHINGTON NOTES.

Happenings in the Departments and About the City.

WASHINGTON, March 18.—[By the Associated Press.] Secretary Morton intends to pursue a policy of economy in the administration of the Agricultural Department. As a result of certain changes in the methods of doing work a reduction in the force in the bureau of animal industry is rendered possible, and forty-seven employees, whose monthly compensation aggregates $45,000, will be dismissed. Of the microscopic force, 121 employees will be furloughed, making a further monthly saving of $6,000.

The Texas delegation saw the President today, and state that he will probably nominate A. V. Terrell of Texas for Minister to Turkey.

Secretary Carlisle today appointed S. E. Gaines of Covington, Ky., his private secretary.

Secretary Gresham and Mr. Grip, the Swedish Minister, today exchanged at the State Department ratified copies of the extradition treaty between the United States and Sweden concluded on the 4th of January last. The treaty goes into effect thirty days from date.

The Government's expenditures up to date this month amount to $22,131,000, exceeding the receipts by $408,000.

The bar of the United States Supreme Court assembled today, and after speeches by Senators Vilas, George, Walthall and Mitchell, Representative Catches and others, adopted resolutions eulogistic of the late Justice Lamar.

Ex-Commissioner of Pensions Raum will open a law office in Chicago, associating himself with Hon. Daniel F. Raum, of Peoria, Ill.

Sensational Voorhees and Turpie and Congressman MacNagley accompanied young W. E. English, son of Hancock's running mate, to the White House today and presented him as a good man for the Swiss mission. The name of Montgomery Hamilton of Fort Wayne was also presented for a foreign mission.

The fourth-class postoffice at Everett, Wash., will be raised to the Presidential class on April 11, 1893.

The Republicans think an effort to reorganize the elective officers of the Senate will be made at this session and are preparing to resist it. A prominent Republican leader stated that the members on his side of the chamber are discussing the situation and would organize a solid opposition. The Democratic Senators say they have not yet decided on the course to be pursued and some of them are disposed to let it go over until December rather than have a fight now.

THE REFORM CLUB PREPARING A BILL FOR REVENUE ONLY.

New York, March 18.—[By the Associated Press.] E. Ellery Anderson, chairman of the Committee on Tariff, of the Reform Club, said this morning that he is hard at work preparing a tariff bill, which the club will submit to Secretary Carlisle for the approval of the administration and submission to Congress when it assembles. "The bill will be in harmony with the Chicago platform," said Anderson. "The duties will be arranged on a revenue-only basis, but we will try to arrange them so that no industry will be crippled." Anderson said he could not give any details of the bill at this time.

UNCLE SAM'S GOLD.

The Treasury Department Unable to Accept All the Offers of Bullion.

WASHINGTON, March 18.—[By the Associated Press.] The Treasury Department is receiving offers of gold for small notes in such numbers that it cannot accept them all. Today it accepted an additional offer of $1,000,000 from Chicago. It is thought by next week that the free gold in the treasury will aggregate between $6,000,000 and $7,000,000. A gain of $900,000 in gold was made at New York yesterday. No gold was taken out for export.

Commissioner Mason has prepared a statement showing the aggregate collections from internal revenue for the first eight months of the current fiscal year to be $107,820,542, an increase over the corresponding period of the previous fiscal year of $7,154,104. The aggregate receipts for February were $301,382 less than a year ago.

THE NAVAL REVIEW.

A General Order in Regard to the Organization of the Fleet.

WASHINGTON, March 18.—[By the Associated Press.] The following general order in connection with the naval review of next May was issued by Admiral Gherardi today:

The organization of the fleet will be as follows: One Admiral, Commander in Chief; Rear Admiral A. E. K. Benson, commanding first squadron, and Rear Admiral John G. Walker, commanding second squadron. The Philadelphia will be the flagship and the Cushing the dispatch boat. The first squadron will be composed of the following: Newark, flagship; Atlanta, San Francisco, Bancroft, Beaufort and Baltimore. The second squadron will have the Chicago for flagship, Yorktown, Charleston, Vesuvius, Concord and Miantonomah.

PRESS BANQUET.

One of the Most Brilliant and Novel Dinners on Record.

WASHINGTON, March 18.—[By the Associated Press.] Tonight, in the banquet hall of the Arlington Hotel, the National Capital Press Club gave its second annual dinner. The dinner was one of the most brilliant and novel in the dining history of the capital. Among the laughter-moving features was a brief one-act drama, which represented an executive session of the Senate, wherein the subject of debate was a poker game at one of the local resorts, and a scene from the House of Representatives with a couple of belligerent statesmen. The speeches were extremely brilliant, but as it was a banquet of newspaper men no report was allowed. Among the most distinguished guests present were Vice-President Stevenson, Secretary of State Gresham, Secretary of the Treasury Carlisle, Secretary of the Interior Hoke Smith, Postmaster-General Bissell, Speaker Crisp, Secretary of the Navy Herbert, Senators Gorman, Lindsay and Dubois, and many Representatives.

Minnesota's Coal Combine.

ST. PAUL, March 18.—The fight over the possession of the coal combine letter book, now in possession of the Legislature, revolves itself into a test of strength between the District Court and Legislature. This afternoon an order was issued requiring Representative Walsh to appear in court on Monday morning with the letter book. Hearing a report of the proposed order, the House of Representatives passed a resolution instructing Walsh to retain possession of the letter book.

Fire in Milwaukee.

MILWAUKEE (Wis.), March 18.—A fire this morning in Friend Bros. block on Broadway damaged the stock of the Straw & Ellsworth Manufacturing Company, of hats and gloves, to the extent of $6000. Some of the stock of Friend Bros. wholesale clothes, was damaged, making the entire loss, mostly by fire and water, in the neighborhood of $75,000. The building was only slightly damaged, and the stocks are fully covered by insurance.

G.A.R. VETERANS.

Everything in Readiness for the State Encampment.

The Streets of the City Assuming a Gala Appearance.

A Cordial Welcome to Be Extended the Old Soldiers.

The Delegations from the North Expected to Arrive Today—The Programme for the Entertainment of the Guests.

The arrangements for the State Encampment of the G.A.R. and kindred organizations are complete, and the streets of the city are beginning to assume a gala appearance. Profuse decorations are to be observed in numerous instances, and the national colors may be seen gracefully draped about scores of buildings.

GRAND ARMY VETERANS. Inquiries at the hotels failed to discover many arrivals of G.A.R. men last evening, but before tonight there will be many of them. A probable estimate as to how many would be present was not obtainable last night, but it is believed that the hotel accommodations at present secured will be ample for all that will come.

Delegates from San Francisco and points north of there were to leave that city by special cars yesterday. The number aboard was to be increased by others at points along the line, and the train bearing them is expected to reach the Arcade depot at 12:30 o'clock this afternoon. A portion of the Reception Committee will be in readiness to meet them, and they will be escorted to the various hotels.

Jesse B. Fuller of Marysville, the Department Commander, is expected to reach here today, and the G.A.R. headquarters are to be at the Hollenbeck Hotel.

A number of veterans are expected from Nevada, and the delegates from points south will, most of them, not come till tomorrow.

No special meetings in connection with the G.A.R. are to be held during this afternoon or tomorrow morning, but tomorrow afternoon the encampment will be organized at Turnverein Hall. Tomorrow evening there will be the general reception, as announced heretofore, at which addresses of welcome will be delivered by Mayor Rowan and Maj. J. A. Donnell, and responses will be made by the representatives of the various organizations.

Tuesday will be devoted to encampment business, except the evening, when the veterans will attend the W.R.C. entertainment at Armory Hall.

The grand review will take place on Wednesday morning. The afternoon will be occupied by a business session, and in the evening there will be the banquet.

Thursday will be spent in visiting the Soldiers' Home at Santa Monica, and on Friday there will be the excursion over the Kite-shaped track by special train, with stops at places of interest.

A representative of Colton was at the G.A.R. committee room yesterday, and stated that he was authorized to invite the veterans to stop at Colton and visit the fair. If they will take the Kite-shaped track excursion on Thursday, which is to be the last day of the fair, it was found, however, that such an arrangement could not be made because of a previous one.

The Reception Committee is composed of the following named persons:

George E. Gard, J. A. Osgood, Dr. Hunt, William S. Daubenspeck, Col. M. Mudge, John Brooker, J. M. Guinn, Mr. Mason, A. W. Patton, Frank Hobart, L. E. Mosher, E. P. C. Klokke, H. Z. Osborne, W. H. Seaman, W. H. Shinn, C. H. Alford, J. M. Johnson, Dr. W. E. Clarke, E. M. Hamilton, H. Jevne, J. Kurtz, C. M. Burr, C. C. Brown, Mr. Downing, Charles Wickman, William Young, Col. H. G. Otis, Mr. Bartholomew, Capt. Newman, J. L. Skinner.

SONS OF VETERANS' ENCAMPMENT. The annual encampment of the Sons of Veterans will be held at Pasadena, opening at 10 o'clock Monday morning.

The train bearing the delegates is to leave San Francisco this morning, and will be boarded by detachments at the various places along the route. The party is scheduled to arrive at the Arcade depot at 7:25 tomorrow morning, at which time the Reception Committee from Pasadena and other members of the organization will be in waiting for them. Soon afterward they will be escorted to the Terminal station, where a train will transport them to Pasadena in time for the opening of their encampment at 10 o'clock.

The delegates will return to this city Monday evening, in order to be present at the general reception, and Post Col. E. W. Conant of San José and Post Col. L. de P. Callahan of this city are expected to deliver addresses on that occasion. Tuesday morning and afternoon will be devoted to department business transacted by the delegates at Pasadena, and in the evening of that day they will attend the entertainment given by the W.R.C. at Armory Hall here. On Wednesday morning the Sons of Veterans will join in the general parade, marching in a body instead of by separate camps. All of the camps in Southern California have been ordered to turn out on that occasion, and the visiting delegates from the northern part of the State will unite with them. They will be led by Col. T. M. Gilbert, Division Commander, together with his staff, which will be in attendance. On Wednesday evening the delegates will attend the soldiers' banquet at Armory Hall.

There are at present in this State eighteen camps of this organization, with an aggregate membership of about five hundred and fifty. One hundred or more delegates are expected here. Col. Gilbert announces that during the week when not at Pasadena he will be at his office, in the Solomon Block, No. 138 1/2 South Spring street, ready to give information to any of the visiting delegates who may wish to apply.

THE WOMAN'S RELIEF CORPS. The W.R.C. State Convention will assemble for organization in Unity Church at 1:30 p.m., Monday. There will be a large amount of department business to be transacted, beside the election of officers, and, as Monday afternoon is likely to be consumed in organization, it is probable that several other business sessions will be held later in the week, at such times as will least conflict with other meetings. On Monday evening the ladies will attend the general reception at the Grand Opera-house, and on Tuesday evening a grand carnival will be held under the auspices of these ladies, at Armory Hall. These entertainments will be under the direction of Mrs. Kendall Holt. It is to be similar to the one given last Christmas, but will be much changed and many new features introduced. Prof. Lowinski's orchestra will be in attendance and several talented vocalists will participate in the exercises.

Mrs. Jennie L. Southworth of Stockton, the Department President, together with the other department officers, are expected to arrive in this city at noon today and will be met at the train by members of the reception and accommodation committees, who will see to it that they find their way to the Hollenbeck Hotel, where other members of those committees will escort them to the W.R.C. headquarters, parlor No. 7, which during the encampment will be at that place.

The number of W.R.C. delegates expected to be present during the coming week is estimated at from one hundred and fifty upward. The local members of this organization are preparing some neat little souvenirs, one of which is intended to be presented to each of the visiting delegates. The souvenir is of orange wood, cut in the shape of a knife. On one side of it is painted in oil colors a sprig of pepper leaves and on the other side is embossed, by Engraver Rockwood, the words "Ninth Department W.R.C. Convention, Los Angeles, 1893."

LADIES OF THE G.A.R. Mrs. Abby L. Burgess of San Jose, the Department President of the Ladies of the G.A.R., arrived in town yesterday, and is stopping at the Hotel Ramona, which place is to be the headquarters of the organization. The State Encampment of the Ladies of the G.A.R. will convene at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon at G.A.R. Hall. There is considerable routine business to be transacted, and adjourned sessions will be held when most convenient, during the week, the annual election of officers being about the last matter taken up. It is intended to hold a reception sometime during the week at a time when it will not conflict with other meetings. Delegates and other members of the order to the number of 100 are expected to be present from other parts of the State. They are scheduled to arrive today and tomorrow, and will be met at the trains by members of the Reception Committee, who will attend to their accommodations. Some of them will come from San Francisco by boat.

About forty ladies met at the headquarters at room 29, Ramona Hotel, yesterday afternoon, and Union Circle No. 19, as it was named, was organized with thirty-five members. The following named ladies were elected officers: President, Mrs. Phoebe Jenkins; Senior Vice-President, Mrs. James McFarland; Junior Vice-President, Mrs. J. B. Ellis; Treasurer, Mrs. Ella Knapp; Chaplain, Mrs. Grace C. Lawrence; Conductor, Mrs. Kate Lyons; Guard, Mrs. Frank McFarland.

This circle was organized largely as a result of the efforts of Mrs. B. S. Bailey of San Francisco, who has been in the city for the past two weeks. Mrs. Bailey is special aide to the Department President.

The Ladies of the G.A.R. is not an auxiliary society like the W.R.C., and can be established where no G.A.R. post exists. Its work is directed not only toward Grand Army men, but also toward all other soldiers, sailors or marines. The membership, however, is confined to near relatives of soldiers and to former army nurses.

THE UNIVERSALISTS. The Universalist State convention meets at Santa Paula March 26 to 30. The Santa Paula people will entertain all who come. Send your names to L. M. Andrews, Santa Paula, for entertainment. Secure reduced rates on the Southern Pacific, by sending at once to R. L. Conger, Pasadena, for certificates. On the Santa Fe certificates can be secured at stations where tickets are bought.

A unique corner of the earth.

That's Coronado Beach. Do you know where it is? Coronado Beach is the peninsula forming the breakwater of the Bay of San Diego, and is situated in the extreme corner of the United States, 124 miles south of Los Angeles and 15 miles from Old Mexico's border land.

DO YOU KNOW WHAT CORONADO BEACH IS? It is the Paradise of the Pacific, the Mecca of tourists in search of rest, health, sport and diversion. It is a "Land of Sunny Days," where care is a stranger and worry a dead letter. Where dyspeptics forget their ills and pessimists are born again, where sick people get well and well people get fat. It is the Utopia for globe-trotters and the land of Acadia for lotus-eaters.

COME AND TARRY With us awhile and enjoy the dolce far niente which is attained here to the height of earthly perfection. "The proof of the pudding is in the eating." We've got the pudding—come and eat, drink and be merry. One never gets the "blues" at Coronado Beach.

ROUND TRIP TICKETS From Los Angeles, Pasadena, San Bernardino, Riverside and Colton are sold for $34, including one week's board in $3 and $3.50 per day rooms.

Dr. Wong Fay's Benevolent Dispensary.

227 S. Main street.

Dr. Wong Fay, from youth being of a sympathetic nature, early secured the services of eminent instructors in the science and art of healing. He is therefore well versed in all phases of internal and external disease; chronic complaints and all kinds of difficult cases readily yield to his skill. Having opened this dispensary, all attending patients will only be charged a nominal price for medicines supplied.

All who are afflicted are respectfully requested to come to this dispensary, where the doctor's best skill and attention will be given to secure effective recovery.

Spring Wraps and Suits.

IN this line, although not yet complete, we are showing some beautiful styles, exclusive patterns. We must admit that we are not the first in the city to show spring garments, as it has been impossible to get the LATE SPRING STYLES, and these are the styles we procure. This is the only house in this line sending its buyer each season East and thereby procuring styles no other house is able to obtain earlier in the season. We expect to have our line complete by the end of the week, and should strenuously advise the ladies to wait for the newer spring designs. Meanwhile we offer you:

- Ladies' gray and brown
- mixed Blazer Suits,
- two pieces.....$3.98
- Ladies' Navy Blue
- Eton Suits.....$3.98
- Ladies' fine Navy Blue
- and Blue Black all wool
- Blazer Suits.....$5.98

New Silks and Velvets.

THIS is a silk season—this is the silk center. There may be larger stocks, but nowhere a choicer, fresher variety of more desirable novelties and staples. Every requirement of correct silk wearers is fully met here, and at such matchless prices as these:

- 12 shades of French Taffetas..... 85c
- 24-inch India Silks in plain colors; Cheney Bros. celebrated make..... 85c
- Plaid Velvets, choice styles.....$1.98
- We show a fine assortment of colored Novelty Dress Patterns—our own importation.

Kid Gloves.

WE invite particular attention of the ladies to this department, as it stands first and foremost in the glove trade of Los Angeles, and to be aware of the fact that among the different kinds of Kid Gloves offered for public favor there has never been the equal of or one that has received the universal commendation that has been accorded the genuine Hte. Jouvin Kid Gloves—invented by Gaults de Hte. Jouvin, at Grenoble, France, in 1834, and up to the present time have never been improved upon, so perfect is the cut and finish. We are sole agents in Los Angeles. Every pair warranted and fitted to the hand.

Delegates Appointed to the Universalist State Convention.

Mr. Webster Again Heard From—Some of Today's Church Services—Personal Notes—Batch of Brevities.

A parish meeting of the Universalist Church was held on Friday evening. E. T. Howe was elected a member of the board of trustees in the place of E. E. Spalding, resigned. The following named were elected delegates to the State convention to be held at Santa Paula on the 28th, 29th and 30th of this month: Rev. Dr. Conger, Rev. Florence Kollock, A. G. Throop, C. H. Keyes, J. C. Cahill and wife, E. Millard and wife, Prof. Sanders and wife, Prof. Conant, Mrs. Arnold. The delegates are empowered to select their own alternates. Credentials will be furnished on application to the pastor of the church. Dr. Hanson and wife and J. H. Swan and wife, who are visiting in Pasadena, were invited to attend and take part in the work. As many as can be expected to go from Pasadena to attend these sessions. An unusually interesting time is promised, and arrangements will be made for entertaining the delegates.

PREPARING TO START ANOTHER BOOM.

When William Cullen Bryant wrote: "Truth comes to earth shall rise again," his prophetic vision must have carried him forward to the fall and rise of Southern California and to that of E. C. Webster, whose name will ever be prominently associated with the stirring times of the balmy boom days of long ago. Foremost in the ranks of the men who were so largely instrumental in making Pasadena what she is today, Mr. Webster kept pace with the unattainable drift of affairs in '86 and '87, until the flood tide of prosperity had been attained, by which time he had amassed a large fortune. With the collapse of the boom Mr. Webster's fortune was swept away. But Pasadena had left him with private improvements in the way of public and private buildings, cement sidewalks and all that sort of thing, which were the outgrowth of the boom, while Mr. Webster still the possessor of a large reserve fund of tireless energy, perseverance and abiding faith in his ability to overcome all obstacles in the attainment of any object to which he might devote himself. It is pleasant, therefore, to record the fact that simultaneous with Pasadena's present unexampled prosperity, Mr. Webster is prospering as in days of yore, with a fair chance of surpassing all previous efforts, all of which remarks, in which the old-timers will be especially interested, are occasioned by the wide swath which that gentleman has recently been cutting in the vicinity of Perris.

Mr. Webster is still a resident of Pasadena, but he has just effected one of the biggest transfers of real estate in the Peris region that has been made in recent years, and the details of which have not before been made public. The sale comprises 13,800 acres of land; the purchase price was $235,000, and the purchaser is President Broome of the California Fruit Canning Company. This immense tract of land adjoins the Perris Irrigation district on the east, on the eastern slope of the Perris Valley, picturesquely located in the midst of foothills and flanked by mountains. News of the purchase will be of interest to the Pasadena capitalists, who have made investments in this locality. The Perris Valley, this tract filling out the connecting link between the Alessandro, the Moreno and the Colorado canals, makes in all about sixty thousand acres in one body, irrigated from the Bear Valley reservoir. When the reporter found Mr. Webster he was just buying a train for the Colton fair, so that further particulars could not be learned. If he once again focuses his undivided attention on Pasadena, a boom could not be more averted than the sunshine.

THE FANS WAKING UP.

Lovers of the national game in Pasadena are greatly interested in the pleasant prospects for a good season's sport. The new manager of the Los Angeles team, Al Lindley, has had friends in this city, and his success in retaining the old-time favorites, "Pop" McAuliffe, "Rusty" Wright and "Kid" Hulen, will in itself be sufficient to attract a liberal patronage from this community all summer. A party of the boys is being organized to attend the opening game of the season, and if the weather is favorable, the Morgan coast will be chartered for the occasion, decorated with banners, etc., and a jolly good time will be had. City Recorder Rose, Councilmen Lusk and Clarke, Dr. Riggs, Charles Swan, Wesley Banbury, Mart Weight, Al Carr, J. R. Burns, Henry Kemby and scores more of the local fans are banking on the Los Angeles team as perennial winners, and wish Manager Lindley all success in his undertaking.

PULPIT AND PEW.

At the Christian Church, on North Fair Oaks avenue, the sermon at 11 o'clock this morning will be preached by G. T. Carpenter, chancellor of Drake University, Iowa. There will be a sermon and administration of baptism by the pastor at 7:30 p.m.

Elder T. D. Garvin of the Christian Church will preach at East Los Angeles this morning.

The Y.M.C.A. will hold a fellowship meeting at Strong's Hall at 3 o'clock this afternoon. Short talks will be made by the delegates to the recent convention at Pomona. Young men are invited.

Rev. C. E. Harris of the Baptist Church will exchange pulpits today with Rev. Dr. Frost of San Bernardino.

Rev. Dr. Strong will preach at the First Presbyterian Church, at 11 o'clock, and the pastor, Rev. N. H. G. Pile, will preach at the evening service.

At the Methodist Church this morning Rev. J. W. Phelps will preach on "The Controversy With His People." The theme of the evening discourse will be "Habit."

PASADENA BREVITIES.

Stylish goods at White's.

Mrs. Frasse and Miss Miller went down to Coronado yesterday to spend Sunday.

Mrs. J. S. Baldwin and daughter, after a four weeks' illness, are able to sit up.

Mrs. Harry Arnold and infant daughter were out from Los Angeles on Saturday.

The High School news yesterday defeated the ideals of Los Angeles by a score of 10 to 4.

And now there is talk of paving Orange Grove avenue. Where is this thing going to stop?

Mr. and Mrs. B. O. Kendall entertained a small company of friends at cards Friday evening.

Another large audience assembled at the opera-house Saturday night. Uncle Tom's Cabin was the attraction.

The small boys were afforded no end of pleasure by the parade which the Uncle Tom's Cabin company gave Saturday afternoon.

The weather Saturday was on its best behavior, and emphasized to the late arrivals the possibilities of our March climate.

If you want to know the good points of the Cleveland bicycle, drop a postal to W. D. Medill at Hotel Green and receive a catalogue.

Capt. C. W. Simpson has returned from Sacramento, where he represented this district during the stormy session of the last Assembly.

The delegates from John P. Godfrey, W. R. C. will leave for Los Angeles on the 0:03 Terminal train to attend the State G.A.R. convention. The headquarters for delegates from the John P. Godfrey

Post and Corps will be at the Irving House, No. 330 South Hill Street.

The members of the Good Templar lodge and some of their friends enjoyed a pleasant social time Friday evening at their lodgerooms on Dayton street.

"A peak in the neighborhood of Mt. Wilson" was the title of a paper read by Mr. Cox at the meeting of the C. C. C. on Friday evening.

The Pickwick Club rooms were the scene of pleasant social festivities Friday evening, which were enjoyed by a number of invited guests, together with the members of this popular organization.

Undoubtedly one of the most entertaining events of the very liberal season on the part of the opera-house management, will be Dr. Culp, in which Frank Daniels and his talented company will appear next Saturday.

J. W. Scoville is making some important improvements on his property at the southwest corner of Orange Grove avenue and Colorado Court. It is stated that Mr. Scoville will soon be working on a new residence on this valuable site.

Over one hundred views, twenty feet square, illustrating the Hawaiian Islands, were shown at the California Club on Friday evening. These views will be interestingly described by Capt. Campbell of Philadelphia.

The lecture on "Abraham Lincoln," which Mr. J. J. Donnell delivered at the Tabernacle Friday evening, was not as largely attended as it should have been. It was a scholarly and eloquent tribute to the memory of the great statesman.

A party of Hotel Green guests, composed of Mr. and Mrs. Harding, Mr. and Mrs. French, Mr. and Mrs. Claypool, G. E. Proctor, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Donnell, Mr. and Mrs. Griffin, J. B. Burns, Mrs. Collin Stewart and Miss Skinner, were out riding Saturday morning in the Morgan. They were photographed prior to their departure by W. H. Hill.

The Ute Hotel company, that is to play at the opera-house next Wednesday evening, has the reputation among professionals of being one of the very successful ones. Its theatrical season, and all are unanimous in saying that it is wonderful the phenomenal business Mr. Woodhull plays to nightly.

This is the first time since the Ute Hotel has been a great money-maker from the opening night.

Among Saturday's arrivals at Hotel Green were W. A. Sutton, H. A. Hedge and son, C. Reuter, San Francisco; J. Warner, Los Angeles; William B. Smith and wife, Fred R. Smith, Monmouth, Ill.; J. B. Whitney, George Volkman, San Francisco; P. S. Ley, Milwaukee; Mrs. Dunn and William Horton of Frank Daniels' Dr. Culp Company.

Mr. C. S. Wilson, Esq., a wealthy private banker, of Victoria, Canada, on Saturday purchased through the agency of E. H. Lockwood, the block owned by W. C. McGregory, which fronts on Orange Grove avenue, and extends from Arlington to Madison drive. Only a few days ago Mr. Wilson purchased Thomas Nelms' entire frontage on Palmetto drive.

Orange Shipment on Consignment—Business Picking Up.

During the past week the orange crop has been moving off considerably faster than it has at any time during the present season. Most of the shipments have been on consignment, and there have, consequently, been no returns to the shippers.

Growers and shippers are confident they will realize fair prices. A good many people are openly accusing the Earl Fruit Company of having been the cause of the depression in the market.

The Earl Fruit Company is said to be circulating in regard to a car of Pomona navel oranges in Chicago for $1.50 per box. Such outrageous reports should, for the good of the whole valley, be handed down and their author exposed. In every case so far reported Pomona oranges have been sold at a profit.

Cheap oranges do not simply affect one's pocket, but every grower and every business man in the valley.

During the past week has improved only slightly, but will be better from this time on, as the fruit-growers begin to realize returns on their crops. The weather, too, is all that one could ask. Yesterday was a spring day, and as a consequence "shopping" improved considerably.

The Southern Pacific will run a special train from this city to the new wharf at Santa Monica today. It will leave at 9 a.m.

This valley is a striking example, at present, of the new law compelling orchardists to spray their trees. The law gives the inspectors power to spray any infected trees and the county defray the expense. In case the owners refuse to do so, the inspectors may have recourse to the land until it is paid. The trees in the valley now present the appearance of having been whitewashed, and scale, as a consequence, is a very scarce article. Inspectors have worked very hard this time.

About 4000 young trees that have been shipped here have been found to be diseased. The Morgan coast will be chartered for the occasion, decorated with banners, etc., and a jolly good time will be had. City Recorder Rose, Councilmen Lusk and Clarke, Dr. Riggs, Charles Swan, Wesley Banbury, Mart Weight, Al Carr, J. R. Burns, Henry Kemby and scores more of the local fans are banking on the Los Angeles team as perennial winners, and wish Manager Lindley all success in his undertaking.

Alonso Case has for the past month been visiting Pomona and other California cities. He will leave for his home in Knob Noster, Mo., today. He is much pleased with Southern California, and Pomona in particular.

Will Overton is the proud possessor of a brand new car. His friends assert that this same new boy does nothing but "holer"—for democracy.

H. G. Tinsley and wife spent yesterday in Los Angeles.

UNIVERSITY.

The winter term of the University of Liberal Arts closes on Tuesday, March 21, for a week's vacation, the spring term beginning the following week, March 29. The sophomore class gives an entertainment at the college chapel on Tuesday evening, March 21.

The University people are rejoiced to see the new building, the new college campus. The northwest part is being transformed into an athletic park, and the Wesley avenue side is to be put into lawn, flower, shrub, etc.

There is quite a building boom in this vicinity. A number of houses are to be built soon on Thirty-first street. A large and elegant cottage is under construction between Hoover and Vermont.

Thirty-first, by Mr. Brien, and a large residence is to be begun soon on the corner of Sunset and Thirty-first. Mr. Hunt has just sold four lots on the corner of Vermont and Thirty-first to a Chicago man, who will build there.

Two houses are going up on Thirty-seventh, near the church.

Friday, March 17, the Rev. and Mrs. E. W. Caswell entertained the students attending the university from Santa Barbara district at their home, No. 1201 Thirty-first street. Mr. Caswell is presiding elder of the Santa Barbara district. Two years ago there were only two students from that district, while at the present time there are nineteen. The house was decorated with flowers and vines, the dining-room and tables one mass of red and yellow flowers. Supper was served at 5 o'clock, after which the company passed a delightful evening with music, songs and readings. Among those present were the following: Miss Frankie Uren, Miss John, Miss Lella Dillard, Miss Lena Weston, Messrs. R. W. of Cleveland, F. W. Thurston, M. S. Moore, George E. Cook, E. E. Hall, H. W. Cummings, P. D. Mansfield, R. G. Curran, E. E. Elliott, E. C. Wilkins, E. D. Ballou, W. B. Card, H. E. Clark, S. S. Webster, L. H. Caswell, R. Conrad.

SAN BERNARDINO COUNTY.

The Horticultural Commissioners are Doing Good Work.

Banquet Tendered to H. W. Patton, by the Citizens of Riverside—Redlands' Novel System of Street Cleaning.

SAN BERNARDINO.

Horticultural Commissioner Muscott says he is not satisfied that the insect pests shall simply be held in check, but is using every effort to have them more free from these marauders each season than they were the one before. He has therefore instructed the inspectors to include in their reports a statement of the condition of orchards as respects injurious insects, as compared with the year before. The reports received are very gratifying. The report from the Riverside district shows a decrease of 60 per cent. in the amount of scale.

SAN BERNARDINO BREVITIES.

E. Weycott is spending a few days in the City of Angels.

Nicolaus, an Italian who stole some trunks in Riverside, was acquitted of the first charge on Saturday.

There will be a packed house to hear the Ward-James combination at the opera-house tomorrow evening.

Monday will be Ontario day at the Citrus Fair, and a special train will be run in the evening on the Southern Pacific, returning at the close of the evening's exercises.

The attendance at the Citrus Fair from this city is increasing daily. On Monday, if the weather is fine, the railroads will have about all they can do to handle the crowds.

Mr. Anna M. Plumb of Chino was granted a decree of divorce on Saturday from her husband, Frederick Plumb, who deserted her in Arizona. She was given the custody of her two children.

San Bernardino is preparing to observe a local Arbor day next Wednesday, at which time leading citizens propose aiding in the planting of street trees, of which San Bernardino is in great need.

The city presents quite a deserted appearance during the afternoon and evening, as many of the citizens and visitors to the city are attending the fair at Colton. Early in the morning, however, street scenes are as animated as usual.

The real estate business is much more active than usual in this county. At the close of the day yesterday, the number of eight to eighteen transfers every day, some of them involving large sums of money. On Friday, however, there were but two transfers made, and the total consideration footed up to but $8834.

RIVERSIDE.

Not often is it the happy lot of a man to receive so promptly the hearty recognition from one's fellow-citizens of a service rendered as was so gratefully accorded Harry W. Patton, of the Banning Herald, at a banquet tendered him by Frank A. Miller, at the Glenwood on Friday evening, in acknowledgment of his services in behalf of the Riverside district.

Mr. Patton, who has been in the position of the late Legislature. He was at his post from start to finish, working with tireless zeal for the measure, and to his efforts is attributed, in large measure, the passage of the bill.

The handsome silk Stars and Stripes, bearing in gold letters "County of Riverside," were presented to the assembly at Sacramento, hung triumphantly over the beautifully-decorated banquet table to greet the grateful citizens as they entered the hall. About the board were seated the following prominent citizens of Riverside county: Harry W. Patton, Frank A. Miller, W. M. Casterline, D. G. Mitchell, J. B. Whitney, George Volkman, San Francisco; P. S. Ley, Milwaukee; Mrs. Dunn and William Horton of Frank Daniels' Dr. Culp Company.

REDLANDS.

Now that Redlands has vitrified brick paved streets the problem has been how best to keep them clean. Soil is carried upon them from the mud roads to such an extent that in rainy weather they have been covered with mud, and in dry, windy weather clouds of dust rise from them.

The school boys, who have been playing on them from the mud roads to such an extent that in rainy weather they have been covered with mud, and in dry, windy weather clouds of dust rise from them.

Friday evening to a good house. The audience was well pleased with the performance.

Dr. Sanborn has gone to Los Angeles for a short visit with friends.

Redlands has not yet sent many to the Citrus Fair. The guests at the Citrus Fair are still in the city.

The snow still rests upon the summit of the mountains, an attractive feature to the landscape.

Mr. W. J. Palmer, president of the Rio Grande Western Railway, took a drive through the city and to Canon Creek Park last week.

A sumptuous dinner was served at the home of Russell W. of Thursday. The occasion being his sixty-sixth birthday. Children and grandchildren to the number of twenty assembled to celebrate the day.

ONTARIO.

The town was gay with flags and bunting Friday, and our citizens vied with one another in making Ontario's tenth birthday a success. All the morning trains were crowded with visitors.

State Sunday-school convention at Santa Ana, commencing Monday evening, March 20, and closing Wednesday evening. All delegates and Sunday-school workers will be cordially welcomed, and entertained free by all on sending their names to Mr. J. C. Galloway, at Santa Ana. The railroads will return a one-third fare all who pay full fare in going, provided they take the agents' receipts when buying. On Wednesday, March 22, the Santa Ana route agents have blank receipts. On Southern Pacific lines, immediately write for blank receipts to C. C. Stiles, No. 10 1/2 South Broadway, Los Angeles.

On Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of this week the society event of the season will occur—the opening of the Delight Millinery Parlor, 107 South Spring street. The display of French pattern bonnets and high art novelties promises to be one of unusual elegance, and the inspection of it will undoubtedly prove a source of great pleasure to the ladies of Los Angeles, all of whom are cordially invited to attend. The services of the most artistic designer on this Coast have been secured, and the styles will be very original and chic. Dainty souvenirs will be presented to each lady.

Kenesaw Post, No. 108, G. A. R., Department of California, will assemble at the post room in East Los Angeles promptly at 8 a. m. Wednesday, March 22, 1893, preparatory to falling into line in the general parade at 10 a. m. It is requested that soldiers and sailors are cordially invited to join the post on that occasion. By order of D. Jones, P. C.; F. M. Morgan, P. Adj. (Official).

Mrs. J. M. Erdman's spring opening of new millinery will take place the first three days of the present week—Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. The display will be unusually fine, and a cordial invitation is hereby extended to every lady in Los Angeles and vicinity to be present and inspect it.

No cards.
Trains leave Santa Fe first street depot for Santa Ana at 6:05 a. m., 8:15 a. m., 11:00 a. m., 1:50 p. m. and 4:30 p. m. on Monday, March 20. Delegates and visitors to the Sunday-school convention, please take notice. Last train leaves Santa Ana for Los Angeles, 5:28 p. m. Reduced rates via Southern California Railway.

People interested in the native flora should attend the meeting of the Horticultural Society in the Chamber of Commerce rooms tomorrow night. The Colorado Irrigation Company Formed, Capital, $7,500,000.

Mutineers from the Bark Hesper Landed in San Francisco.

The New Proprietors of the San Francisco Evening Post Will Take Charge on Monday—General Coast Notes.

By Telegram to the Times.

San Diego, March 18.—[By the Associated Press.] The Colorado River Irrigation Company has filed articles of incorporation with the County Clerk. From the document, as filed, it appears that the company was first incorporated under the laws of Colorado as the Arizona and Sonora Land and Water Company, but that last October the corporation name was changed to the Colorado River Irrigation Company. Its capital stock is fixed at $7,500,000, and the principal offices are in Denver. The purpose of the corporation as set forth is to construct irrigation canals, harbors, docks and railroads, to subsidize lands, to establish towns and introduce settlers, all on lands in California, Arizona, Sonora and Lower California. C. H. Dow is president of the company. This is the company that has been making extensive surveys in the eastern part of San Diego county, and is preparing to irrigate about a million acres of land in that section by taking water from the Colorado River.

SESSION CLOSED.

The Editors Finish Up Their Business and Attend the Fair.

ONTARIO, March 18.—[By the Associated Press.] The Southern California Editorial Association—closed its session here this morning. The following delegates were elected to attend the meeting of the National Association at Chicago in May: H. Z. Osborne of the Angeles Express, C. A. Gardner of Pasadena, Gardner Johnson of the Santa Ana Tribune, Althea Peters, T. J. Hammer of the Los Angeles Hotel Gazette, G. P. Tebbitts of the Santa Barbara Independent, and Henry Kuchel of the Anaheim Gazette.

A resolution was passed asking Gov. Markham to appoint S. Craig compiler of California World's Fair pamphlets. A resolution was introduced opposing the removal of the State capital to San José, on the ground of being unfavorable to State division. Action was deferred, and the party left for the Colton fair on the noon train.

SALE OF THE POST.

The New Proprietors Will Take Charge of the Newspaper on Monday.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 18.—[By the Associated Press.] The Evening Post, one of the leading afternoon papers of this city, has been sold to Hugh Hume and John H. Cosgrave of San Francisco. The new proprietors take possession of the paper on Monday.

Mr. Hume will conduct the editorial department and Cosgrave will have the business management of the paper. The Post, which has been heretofore Republican in politics, will now be independent, with Democratic leanings. Both Hume and Cosgrave are well known as active and experienced newspaper men. The price paid for the paper has not been stated.

A Decision in R. v. the Matter of Running Sheep into Mexico.

SAN DIEGO, March 18.—[By the Associated Press.] Collector Barry has just received a decision from the Board of General Appraisers at New York sustaining his action in assessing duty on 600 lambs sold here one year ago by Andrews Berecechea. The latter protested against the payment of the duty, holding that they were American product. He will now have to pay, and this will probably make other flock-masters fear to continue the loose methods practiced on the international line by running sheep into Mexico to escape the Assessor, and then returning in time for clipping and lambing.

The Geary Registry Law.

New York, March 18.—Lawyer Joseph M. Choate today confirmed the report from San Francisco to the effect that the Chinese Six Companies had retained him to fight the Geary registry law. Ex-Assistant United States District Attorney Maxwell Evans will be associated with Choate in an effort to defeat the Geary law. Evans will see that the programme laid down is carried out, and Choate is to make an argument in the Supreme Court at Washington when the case reaches there.

ONLY TWELVE DAYS

Remain of the $5.00 a Month Rate

For Catarrh and All Diseases Arising Therefrom.

Those Wishing to Take Advantage of This Remarkably Low Rate

Must Do So Within the Next Twelve Days.

Catarrh, and all diseases arising therefrom, treated both locally and constitutionally at the rate of $5.00 per month, and all medicines furnished free until cured.

CATARRH OF THE STOMACH.

Complicated With Inter-Costal Neuralgia and Accompanied With Violent Heart Symptoms.

For several years I have been troubled with catarrh, which I think was caused by cold drafts rushing through my store, upon the door being opened by my customers coming and going; at any rate I was constantly with a cold during the spring and winter months. My nose kept discharging all the time, the mucus dropped back into my throat and a ringing noise in my ears at times. I kept up a continual hawking and spitting, but was unable to discharge the mucus from my throat.

My trouble continued in this way until last December, when I suddenly became worse. My stomach seemed to give out all at once. During the day I would be attacked by severe fits of hunger and intense dizziness for what was to me formerly delicacies, but after eating a few mouthfuls a complete disgust and loathing for all food would occur. I was rapidly losing flesh and growing weaker every day.

My heart began to palpitate frantically, and a cold, clammy perspiration would ooze from every pore of my body. I was pale and shivery, my head would swim, and my feet would feel as if they were on cotton. I was unable to sleep, and I was constantly in a state of nervous prostration.

Under the care of the first physician with whom I placed myself I grew no better. My wife became alarmed and I dis-outraged. I called another physician, who refused to treat me, saying that my condition was beyond his power to cure. I was then placed in the hands of Dr. De Monco and Associates, who have cured me of my catarrh and all diseases arising therefrom at the rate of $5.00 a month and furnish all medicines free until cured. For all other diseases the rate will be low and uniform.

During the month of March Dr. De Monco and Associates will treat Catarrh and all diseases arising therefrom at the rate of $5.00 a month and furnish all medicines free until cured. For all other diseases the rate will be low and uniform.

Their Mail Treatment.

In addition to their office treatment and for the benefit of those who cannot visit them, they have "question blanks" which they will send to you upon application by mail. Be sure to answer each question carefully, for upon this depends the success of their treatment. Medicines will be promptly shipped to your address.

Goodbye to Catarrh

Saturday Evening, March 18th.

A lady called at a certain grocery store yesterday and asked for a can of ST. CHARLES Cream. The dealer, who had not supplied his store with this brand, wrapped up a tin of milk which he had in stock without telling his customer the difference.

Today she called at his store and said she wanted no more "of that milk."

Consumers will not be imposed upon if they insist on the "Gold Cow" with the words ST. CHARLES Evaporated CREAM. The word "Unsweetened" appears across the cow.

In the cut below this word "Unsweetened" does not show plainly. Still it is there, and also appears on every can of ST. CHARLES.

On March 19, 1894, John, Duke of Roxburgh, died in London.

He spent forty years collecting rare books of extraordinary value. When sold at auction in 1812, one volume, "Boccaccio's Decamerone," printed at Venice in 1476, brought $2300, or nearly $10,650. Since his time many distinguished Americans have made vast collections of curios, and Kan Koo has sold many valuable curios of priceless historical value. Your attention is called to our interesting exhibition of California, Indian, Mexican, Chinese and Japanese curios, which we sell at profits generally asked for staple articles. No fancy prices and goods as represented.

CATARRH.

Catarrh is often regarded by the patient as a cold in the head, and he often expresses his astonishment at his remarkable tendency to contract a fresh cold. Indeed, he declares he is scarcely free from one before he takes another, and he is always exceedingly careful. It is also a matter of surprise to him that he always seems to settle in the head and throat.

At times many of the symptoms of catarrh may seem to abate, and the patient is led to hope that the disease is about to wear out; but another class of symptoms soon appears, and the disease is about to begin its character and extended to the throat. A sense of weariness is sometimes felt in reading, speaking or singing, hoarseness at times occurs, a sensation of dryness is sometimes felt in the throat, or it appears that some foreign substance, as, for instance, a hair, is obstructing the throat; there becomes a sense of languor and fatigue, the breath lessens upon a little exertion, a short, hacking cough is produced, and in clearing the throat, a feeling as though there were not more enough in the chest to breathe; these and other symptoms occur after the disease has made considerable progress. Then it is a time when consumption is about to begin its dreadful work. Up to this point the progress of the disease may have been slow, and the patient may have been slow in its progress, but it is now that the disease is about to begin its character and extended to the throat. WEATHER FORECASTS.

Foster's Predictions for the Next Ten Days.

Local Forecasts—When the Next Storm Wave is Due on the Meridian of Los Angeles—Let There Be Light.

Specially Contributed to The Times.

St. JOSEPH (Mo.) March 18.—[Copyright, 1893, by W. T. Foster.] My last bulletin gave forecasts of the storm wave to cross the continent from March 17 to 22. The next will reach the Pacific Coast about the 28th, cross the Western mountains by the close of the 24th, the great central valleys from the 25th to the 27th, and the Eastern States about the 28th. This storm will be of more than average force.

The cool wave will cross the Western mountains about the 26th, the great central valleys about the 28th and the Eastern States about the 30th.

The first part of April will be cool, the Eastern States will have very rough weather the first few days of the month and the whole country will experience very stormy weather after the 10th. Excessive rains in places and local droughts in other parts. The month will be characterized for its extremes of weather.

FOSTER'S LOCAL FORECASTS.—The storm waves will reach this meridian and the other changes noted will occur at and within 100 miles of Los Angeles within twenty-four hours of sunset of the dates given below:

March 19—Wind changing.
March 20—Cooler and clearing.
March 21—Fair and cool.
March 22—Moderating.
March 23—Warmer.
March 24—Storm wave on this meridian.
March 25—Wind changing.

Let There Be Light.

Back of the Azonic period we know nothing, from geological evidences, about the formation of the earth. Above the azonic is a perpetual round of changes. The silurian and devonian ages are noted for their deposits of lime, and the ages following for deposits of carbon. The first division follows the condition that would result from the evolution of the earth from its cometic period to its planetary period and the second from the effects of our moon-comet coming in contact with the earth.

From the standpoint of reasoning our earth-comet's envelope consisted principally of carbon. In examining the spectra of comets and the remains of aerolites that fall on the earth, we find it not uncommon for certain minerals to predominate in one, while other minerals predominate in another. The varied colors of the planets can be accounted for on no other theory.

Taking the two grand divisions of the earth's so-called crust, we find that beginning at the azonic rocks for one and at the lower carboniferous for the other, the strata are deposited just as the laws of nature require, supposing that the minerals and metals were held suspended, in each case, above the earth by the action of heat or electricity.

Now let us leave the geologic record for a time and go to the history or rather powerful evidences exist going to prove that long before the time of Moses an age of superior intelligence existed and a civilization far superior to any known to have existed since. The Nile country was surely the center of that civilization, and because of its geographic location being such that cataclysms that have destroyed all traces of other old civilizations have left the Nile country unharmed, therefore the records, legendary and otherwise, of Egypt, have been better preserved than those of other countries.

I want to introduce the book of Genesis in this argument as I did that of Job when I was discussing comets. Bigotry and superstition are so prevalent in the world that many want to deny to me the right to use Job and Genesis in a scientific discussion. But that superstitious idea that these two books are too sacred to be mentioned in the newspapers of today is rapidly breaking and soon no trace of it will remain.

Moses obtained his knowledge of past events from what, in his day, were very ancient histories and these histories he found in the records of Egypt and possibly Babylon, his ancestral race having formerly lived in that country, of which Babylon was the capital.

In reference to the book of Genesis, the wonder of this age is that in the time of Moses the geologic structure of the earth's crust was known. That book, in recording the progress of creation, lays down precisely the periods as we find them recorded in the rocks of the earth. "And the earth was without form and in confusion," says Moses. We might truthfully repeat the same sentence in reference to the great comet of 1811. This comet returns to our sun in about three thousand years; its head, including the envelope, was about one hundred and twelve thousand miles in diameter and its tail, when near the sun, was 112,000,000 miles in length. When the envelope and tail of that comet condensed and fell to the solid body it will probably form a much larger planet than our earth. Who will dare say that our earth did not go through the same evolutions we now see in progress in the great comets!

Moses again says: "God made the firmament and divided the waters which were under the firmament from those which were above the firmament." The word firmament as here used means the region of the air, the sky, the heavens. The old records from which Moses gained his information recognized that there were two bodies of water, one above and one on the earth. That above consisted of the cloud belts such as we now see on all the planets except Mars and the earth, and while these cloud belts shut out the lights, sun, moon and stars spoken of in the third period of creation as chronicled by Moses, they did not shut out the diffused, dim light he mentions in the first period. The fact that a large portion of the water was then suspended above the earth, in accordance with the geologic record and the evolution of planetary worlds, and, in order that man might then live on the earth, that suspension of the waters must have been caused by our moon then being very near the earth, and not by internal heat of the earth, as geologists suppose.

Our linguists say that the word which is translated "in the beginning," is from the root "to be moved, to be shaken," and therefore the upper deep is described as being in motion, revolving around the earth, as Jupiter's belts revolve around his body.

The waters on the earth were called seas, and those above the earth the deep. Moses says: "And darkness was upon the face of the deep." Not the lower deep, the seas, as we might suppose was meant, but the upper deep, the cloud belts and the rings then surrounding the earth and shutting out the light of the sun.

It was believed that God dwelt in the sky, or had his throne established upon the upper side of a solid floor called heaven, and therefore the text says: "The spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters." This does not mean that the spirit or law moved on the seas or oceans, but upon the upper deep, the cloud belts. How did this spirit or law move upon this upper deep?

Millions of years had elapsed since our moon-comet's close proximity to the earth had raised these cloud belts from the earth and mingled its own waters and minerals, principally carbon, with those of the earth's envelope, and as the moon receded from the earth, as it is still receding, the heavier materials, the metals and minerals, especially the carbon, of which comets are principally composed, condensed, fell to the earth and permitted the light of the sun to dimly penetrate to the earth. When that had been accomplished by the natural workings of universal law the momentous command, "Let there be light," appears in the Mosaic record.

CENTRAL W.C.T.U.

Systematic Giving and Social Purify, the Subjects Discussed.

At the regular meeting of the Central W.C.T.U. on Friday afternoon, Mrs. Ross, superintendent of the department of literature, conducted an exercise on systematic giving. Reading on the subject were given by Mrs. Garbutt, Mrs. Saxton and Mrs. More. After which Mrs. Ross gave an account of the adoption by herself of the system of giving one-tenth, which had been so satisfactory that she proposed never to discontinue it. Mrs. Hutton spoke on the subject, and in the course of her remarks said that if Christians would all follow the Bible method of giving, there would be no need of begging for benevolent purposes.

Mrs. Sexton, superintendent of the department of social purity, addressed the union. She remarked that the idea of the founders of this department was that it is the duty of Christian women to stem the tide of impurity which exists in the civilized world. The cause of its existence is ignorance, and the fault is in the homes. There is too much of housekeeping and too little of homemaking among them. The endeavor is to strike at the root of the evil by proper education.

Resolutions were adopted strongly condemning the action of Mrs. Frona Eunice Waite in regard to photographs designed to be used as models for a statue for the World's Fair, and demanding that she shall be removed from the position in which she has been placed by the World's Fair Commissioners.

Mrs. Southwick was appointed superintendent of juvenile work.

It was decided that the celebration of the tenth anniversary of the Central W.C.T.U. organization shall be held on April 5 or 7, as will yet be determined. It will be an all-day meeting, with a basket lunch at noon. It is intended, as far as possible, that all who have been connected with the society in the past shall be present, and that there shall be a resume of work that has been done and that which has been attempted; the progress it has made in public opinion and the good that has sprung from the society. It will also be a time of rejoicing and gaining inspiration for new work on account of the lifting of the burden of debt from the temple.

At Kings' No. 120 W. First street, is the place to buy tea sets at factory prices, watches of all kinds at first cost, diamonds at importers' prices and his beautiful fixtures at 50 cents on the dollar—such as show and side cases, counters, regulator, plate glass mirrors. Remember all his goods are new and choice designs. Everything must be sold in sixty days.

I am often reminded of a remark made long ago by John B. Gough—a man who believed in humanity, and the magical influence of human kindness. Speaking of those who were apparently dead to good influences he said: "Up a great many pair of winding stairs in the heart there is a door, and on that door is written 'man'."

And the Saunterer believes that there is truth in this assertion of Mr. Gough's, and that the key to unlock that door is kindness. Sometimes the door is hard to find, but it is there at the head of those devious stairways.

I was reminded of that remark, made so many years ago, on Friday, when into my hands was put a copy of some of the many letters written by the boys at the State School at Whittier, just after the death of Mrs. Lindsey, the noble wife of the superintendent. Those letters were full of pathos, of tenderness and of sorrow. The love of those boys for their gracious woman, so ever thoughtful of their needs, so considerate for their welfare, so generous with her sympathy, were full of the fragrance of gratitude, and the work which she did for them will be her noblest monument.

There is no doubt that the boys will for others' good; whose lives are dedicated to works of benevolence and of kindness. What a beautiful epitaph is this extract from the letter of one of those boys to his mother: "If there was ever a purer or sweeter woman I never saw her. She was as long as a friend of mine, and I am sure I feel her loss as if I were her own son, for she treated me as you would in every respect."

And another boy writes of her funeral: "It was a sad time, indeed, and her memory was as long as any of the Whittier boys live. She was one of the best friends we ever had. The boys loved her as a mother, and it was a sad day for us all."

These are but a sample of the half hundred letters that the Saunterer was permitted to see, and while they speak volumes for the gracious and lovely woman who has gone to her reward, they teach us also that the boys in this institution have hearts susceptible to kindness, which is the surest lever to uplift the race.

I saw a lovely picture in black and white one day last week, by one of our artists, Mrs. Dr. R. W. Haynes. It was that of a charming young girl, in the fresh beauty and loveliness of her fair maidenhood. It was entitled "Fast Asleep," and the whole attitude of the young girl, who had fallen asleep in a sitting posture, leaning against a vine-lad trellis for support, was one of undisturbed ease. The dew of youth was upon her sweet lips; the beauty of the morning upon her white lids and round cheeks, and the whole face was such an expression of innocent loveliness, that the picture was like a beautiful poem that one loves to study. It held a wonderful charm of expression that showed the power of the true artist.

Before me as I write is another picture, the work of J. Bond Francisco. It is the face of age—the face of an old, gray-haired man, with seamed and wrinkled visage; the teeth gone from the old mouth, the lips sunken and the dimmed eyes looking steadily and thoughtfully, as if fixed upon some vision of the past. The full beard is heavy and gray, and there is strength in the square-cut chin, and character in the strong, Roman nose. The strap of his work-apron is across his sturdy shoulders, and a gray muller is about his neck. The anatomy of the old face and the texture of the skin, is perfect. It is a picture of real, every-day life, and it tells the story of struggle and toil—but there is peace in the aged face, and a look which seems to say: "The long, long life of all behind me now, and my life is almost ended. It is well, and I am content."

A little chap of my acquaintance was telling me that as he was going home from school one day this week, he was overtaken by a pleasant, soldierly-looking man, who, after speaking of the wonderful growth of Los Angeles, went on to tell him something of himself. Nineteen years ago, he said, when a lad of 17, he rose early one morning while the rest of the family were sleeping, and ran away from home. Nineteen years he had been a wanderer in foreign lands, with no word from father or mother; they probably thought him dead, but he would surprise them that night. "They live only five miles from here, and it will not be late when I reach home. I wonder if they will know me. I am sure mother will, for mothers never forget." The man's face, brown and sunburnt though it was, lighted up with the glow of happy anticipations. The boy's heart was beating again, and it reached out to its mother, and its mother's greeting. He was coming home with a life full of changeable experiences, grown to manhood amid scenes new, and strange and stirring; as he neared the places familiar to his childhood, up through all the earth-weight of temptation, of toll, and the stern battling with life, there crept to his heart the pure, fresh, soul-soothing love for the dear ones at home, whom, years ago, he had so carelessly forsaken.

Joy to you, wanderer! Glad home-greetings and loving welcome.

I was out the other day, sauntering slowly along, as is my wont, when I was overtaken by a gentleman who appeared to me to be a constitutional grumbler. He was from the East, and had come here because he had heard, he said, that California was a land of perpetual sunshine; "and just look at the rain we've had this month," he added. "I have hardly dared to venture out since March came in without my umbrella. And I've heard so much about the large heartedness of Californians, but I don't see but what it costs 'as much to live here as anywhere.'"

There was nothing right anywhere in the estimation of this man with jaundiced vision. The climate, because, forsooth, it had rained for a few days, and the people, because they had not made him a present of his board bill, were all wrong. To have heard him talk and fret and grumble, you would have supposed him to be a modern Atlas, that the burden of all the imaginary wrongs of the universe was resting upon his shoulders. Such an individual is the personification of folly.

THE GAGE INQUEST.

Despondency the Only Cause for the Suicide.

Coroner Cates held an inquest yesterday afternoon on the body of A. K. Gage, the carpenter who committed suicide Friday night at Vernon, the jury returning a verdict that the deceased came to his death by a bullet wound inflicted by his own hand. Messrs. Carlton, Whelan and S. R. Warfield, who were acquainted with Gage during life, testified briefly in substance as related by THE TIMES in the report of the suicide, no additional light being thrown upon the motive for the act beyond that of despondency. Gage's effects were found $48.65 in cash, which will probably be applied to the expense of burial. The funeral will take place on Monday, supposedly under the auspices of the Masons, of which order the suicide was a member.

The Palmer-Blanchard Case.

The many-times continued trial of the notorious prostitute George Palmer and Addie Blanchard was called yesterday afternoon in Justice Seaman's department of the Police Court and closed both for the defense and prosecution, save for the submitting of certain authorities on the part of the former, for what purpose the Court postponed the case until Monday. The charge preferred against the women is that of vagrancy, one of the most difficult to secure a conviction on. Before entering upon the argument of the case, C. C. Stephens, Esq., for the defense, moved that another continuance be granted on the ground that he was not in condition to conclude the case for his clients. Deputy District Attorney Davis objected to this, claiming that the matter had gone over from time to time and should be concluded. The Court sustained the objection, being of the same opinion as the prosecution.

LADIES, READ THIS.

The engagement of Ward and James just closed has been a remarkably successful one from all points of view. The audiences have been large and enthusiastic, and the playing, as a rule, in keeping with the unities. The one really notable feature of the performances given by this company, however, has not been the playing of the stars, but instead, was the brilliant work of Charles D. Herman, who, if we mistake not, is destined to win great fame in the legitimate drama. He has a splendid stage presence, an expressive countenance, a voice that is deep, full and rich with melody, and a keen intelligence, which makes his personation of character striking and distinctive. He has the rare faculty of sinking his individuality in the rôle assumed, and is free of the mannerisms which mar the playing of many actors who are billed as stellar attractions. His playing is at once a delight and an education in the art of seeming. Louis James appeared to great advantage in the rôles of "Brutus" and "Othello," and particularly as the jester in Provinciana da Rimini. He is certainly one of the best all-round actors on the American stage.

Mr. Ward rises at times to the point of greatness, but his tricks of gesture are such as to mar many of his strongest bits of playing.

The mounting of the plays given during the week was superb, and served largely to make the engagement one of the most notable played here for many seasons.

That the world loves to laugh is an old saying, and it certainly would appear that Frank Daniels was put upon this sphere to satisfy this inclination of the human family. On the occasion of his reappearance here at the Los Angeles Theater tomorrow night he will be seen in an entirely new and original farce comedy, which has been christened Dr. Cupid, and which is credited with being the best vehicle he has ever had. On its first production Dr. Cupid met with an unequivocal success, not surprising, for the piece is said to possess an original plot in which Mr. Daniels is afforded a fresh field for the exercise of his talents. As "Theophile Mudge," proprietor of a summer hotel, he, to enhance the popularity of his hostelry, joins every secret society of the world. To reap the advantage of this universal membership he gives the grips and pass words of all the mystic orders to every one he meets in the hope of finding "a good brother." The amount of fun that Frank Daniels can extract from so rich and cranky an individual as this, those who have seen him as "Packingham Gilledge" in Little Puck may readily imagine.

Another new and very funny device introduced by the author of Dr. Cupid is the transference of the physical, mental and moral peculiarities from one individual to another. "Mudge" is afflicted with a large and troublesome wen on the side of his neck, which he thinks is the only obstacle which hinders him from being a very handsome man. In his desire to have this blemish removed he submits to a surgical operation. The wen is cut off and a piece of skin from another man's face is patched over the lacerated cuticle. This proves disastrous to the "Mudge" household, inasmuch as "Mudge's" disposition, which, up to the time of the amputation of the wen, had been of the meekest sort, suddenly undergoes a remarkable change, and he develops a wild desire for the pleasures of sporting life. His hotel undergoes a remarkable transformation, and is the scene of many wild orgies, in which "Mudge" and his boon companions have a very hilarious time. It is discovered that the generous patient who so kindly furnished the graft is an unmitigated villain—a wife poisoner, confidence man, bunco stealer, chief of a pirate crew and an out and out blackleg of the deepest dye. "Mrs. Mudge" naturally concludes that he has inherited a lot of traits by blood transfusion, hence the complications which ensue. Many unique specialties, bright and original ideas, funny stage incidents, catchy music and other entertaining features are introduced, which go to make up this very bright comedy. Mr. Daniels is supported by a company of clever people, and they will all stay here and have fun with us for three nights.

Aaron H. Woodhull appears at the Grand Operahouse Tuesday evening in a comedy concert called Uncle Hiram. He is supported this season by Troja Griswold, a pretty girl, who is said to sing topical songs and do other special things in a fetching manner. The play contains many striking mechanical and scenic effects, including a complete sawmill outfit, with a forty-eight inch buzz saw ripping up lumber in view of the audience, a boiler explosion, a great railroad scene, etc.

George H. Primrose and William H. West still retain the title of the Merry Monarchs of Burnt-cork Minstrelsy, and their reputation is world-wide. They appear at the Grand Operahouse next Thursday evening with a programme made up of new and interesting novelities and jokes and music of the very latest pattern. The performance from the first part to the finish is said to be the best ever seen on the minstrel stage. The company is made up of artists in their various parts, and first-class entertainment is promised, comprising, in addition to the purely minstrel features, many musical and other specialties of a taking kind.

"Stockwell's spectacular Uncle Tom's Cabin will be seen here with Peter Jackson as "Uncle Tom" and his manager as the auctioneer. The performance of these two gentlemen has given to the lovers of this old-time play more than one idea of how interesting and good a part can be placed on the stage after seeing so many ordinary and different companies around and about the country, all of which only give a faint presentation of the Southern play. The production of Mr. Stockwell's version will be one of many scenes and brilliant, introducing a series of stage pictures, special mention being made of the beautiful transformation scene. Mr. Jackson has received many flattering notices for the excellent manner in which he renders his character.

There will be one performance at the Grand Operahouse on Wednesday evening, March 22.

The Park Theater will present The French Spy this week with an especially strong cast, fine scenery and costumes, and the other accessories necessary to make this stirring play a success.

IN THE LOBBY.
Annie Pixley is going to reproduce Miss.
There is a shortage in the soubrette market.
Alice Harrison is dangerously ill in New York.
Henry E. Dixey is again on the road with Adonis.
Modjeska is about to take up the study of Sanscrit.
Salt Lake City is to have a new and very swell theater.
Julia Marlowe has given the city of Pittsburgh a fountain.
Henry C. de Mille, the playwright, left an estate of but $10,500.
Frank G. Carpenter's date at the Los Angeles Theater has been changed to April 17.
Yvette Guilbert has refused $5000 a month and all her expenses to appear in New York.
The Lehton season appears to be having no effect this year on theatrical business in New York. The papers of the metropolis report that the theaters are doing better than ever before, nearly all the houses are drawing large audiences and none of them are closed, as in former years.

David Belasco declares that he is through collaborating, and will hereafter go it alone.

Charles Wyndham is coming to this country, and will produce a new play, The Bauble Shop.

The latest English play is called The Silent Battle. Charles Frohman has secured the American rights.

Jakobowski, the composer of the opera Ernani, has composed a new one, entitled Peg Woffington.

Henderson's great spectacular production, All Baba, has captured the Bostonians, the business in that city being phenomenal.

Lucius Henderson, who plays the rôle of the musician in Edward Milton Boyle's Friends, is having a great reception wherever he appears en route.

Stuart Robson's production, The Comedy of Errors, is to be a quaint and modest revival next season, and entirely shorn of its spectacular features, which were made so prominent last year.

piece to Frona Eunice Waite's California Venus.

Stockwell's Uncle Tom's Cabin is more of a spectacular production than has been given by the ordinary traveling company, although he does not bring two "Lawyer Marks," two "Topseys," two "Evas," two burros and a herd of bloodhounds, but instead we are promised the production as written by Mrs. Stowe.

"Squire Abington" is dead. Well, the world had much use for him, and consequently loses little.

Three days of sunshine after rain are very agreeable, but they will make the orange-growers hustle to get rid of their crop.

Let the friendly and patriotic sentiments of this people be expressed in decorations throughout the city on the occasion of the presence among us of the Grand Army veterans.

The Chinese have only about six weeks longer in which to register in accordance with the Geary law. If they are delinquent after that time there is going to be the music of the tom-tom in the air.

The Grand Army of the Republic has furnished funds to equip a ward in the Confederate Soldiers' Home at Richmond, as a return for courtesies extended to members of the Grand Army on a recent visit to that place. Honors are even, and the hatchet is buried between the veterans.

Los Angeles is preparing to extend a pleasant and patriotic greeting to the veterans of the Grand Army, who have already commenced to "rally on the center" for the State encampment. They are all welcome—these men of once supreme action, of sublime endurance and heroic achievement; of march and bivouac; of battle and blood and iron—the men of '61! The Eagle from his perch bids the boys hail and welcome.

The trial shipment of navel oranges from Azusa to Liverpool, England, will no doubt encourage further shipments. The fruit, after a trip of three weeks, arrived in good condition and sold for $8.50 a box. This will net the growers from $1.00 to $1.25 per box. The returns are not large, but it should be remembered that the fruit was of large sizes—98 and 112 to the box—which are rejected as undesirable by the American buyers.

The fact that Reel B. Terry and other prominent Democratic politicians of Fresno have become so worked up over recent developments in the McWhirter murder case that they have commenced a system of bulldozing and would-be terrorism, lends strong color to the idea that there is a political plot back of the murder. The other day W. D. Grady challenged Crittenden Thornton of San Francisco, Mrs. McWhirter's counsel, to a duel with revolvers at fifteen paces. It is believed that the prisoner, Polly, has made a full confession, and if so, the whole story of the crime is sure to come out.

It is reported from Washington that Secretary Carlisle has elaborated a plan for the complete reorganization of the currency, and that it will be presented to the next Congress. The plan includes the repeal of the silver purchase law and of the State bank tax, and the issue of currency by banks under State charter, subject to the general supervision of the Federal Government, the security for such currency being provided for under State laws, requiring the approval of the General Government. That would carry out a couple of the provisions of the Democratic platform. In what respect it is better for the currency to be issued by State banks than by the Nation it is hard to see, however, inasmuch as the Government is still called upon to supervise the issue and protect it from wildcat operators. It will be time to discuss the measure, however, when it is presented with all of its details.

In accordance with a suggestion made by the Times some time ago, a mass-meeting of the orange-growers of Southern California has been called at Colton for next Tuesday. There certainly can be no harm in a general conference of growers to discuss the state of the industry, and it is possible that some plan of cooperation may be proposed to improve the state of the market in subsequent seasons. The method of shipping on consignment, which has been more or less in vogue in former years, and which the middlemen have attempted to make the rule this year, is unsatisfactory to the producers and can never meet their requirements. We suggest that the convention discuss the plan of local auctions, which has many points in its favor, and may offer a solution of the difficulty. If Eastern houses were assured of supplies at low current rates by simply keeping a buyer in Southern California, thus obviating the expense of maintaining packing-houses and a corps of buyers, packers, clerks and other employees, we think many more of them would try to purchase direct. There would be enough buyers on hand during the season to cause a reasonable competition, and the sales could be made for cash.

Sacramento's Moral Turpitude.

A meeting of citizens of Sacramento was held a few evenings ago at which an address to the people of the State was prepared. The address, quoting its own words, is for the purpose of counteracting the "outrages and false statements" circulated through the press "assailing this city as to its health, its sanitation, its hospitality and the public spirit and moral atmosphere of the municipality."

The Stockton Mail, which is a near neighbor to the outraged Sacramentans, and ought to be well posted on the situation, has this to say:

Doubtless the people of Sacramento feel that it is time they should say something, but the utterance comes rather late to them any substantial good. The situation long since passed the talking point. The Sacramentans were solicited to act, they were urged to act, they were almost shamed into action, but they would do nothing. The moral sentiment of the community was at such a low ebb that it could not be raised by appeals even to decency and respect for the laws.

The Mail then goes into specifications of Sacramento's delinquency, taking up some of the points already presented by the Times. The demoralization of the State Fair is thus set forth:

Half of the newspapers of the State have been demanding that the place of holding the State Fair be changed because of the "saturnalia of crime" (this is the exact phrase) which has uniformly characterized the fair season. It has been notorious for years that all sorts of wickedness have prevailed in Sacramento during the two weeks of September devoted to the annual fair of State products, and have seemingly been encouraged by the authorities. Swindling gambling games have flourished openly on nearly every street before the very eyes of the officers whose sworn duty it was to enforce the State law against such devices for fleecing the unwary. It was not even pretended that the evil should be suppressed but could not be, for the district fair next following the State Fair is held in Stockton, where the law against gambling is strictly enforced, and the same people of Sacramento did not want to suppose that the fair would be any different.

On the contrary, their City Trustees passed an ordinance legitimizing the vice. Men from other portions of the State hesitated about taking their sons and daughters to the devil's circus at the same time as many stayed away on their own account.

All this has been discussed time and again by the newspapers, but the people of Sacramento put it on the sordid ground of personal gain, and preferred to endure the stigma for the money there was about to be made. A general feeling has been rife for some time that the State Fair is a demoralizing agency that should be abolished if its criminal accompaniments cannot be suppressed. Each recent appropriation from the State treasury for its support has been fought on this ground, if we remember rightly, and the Legislature just adjourned flatly refused the $40,000 asked for. It was pointed out to Sacramentans time after time, but to no avail, that the Stockton District Fair was a success growing greater with the years, whose receipts already nearly equaled those of the State institution, and that this increasing popularity was due to a great extent to the fact that in Stockton during the fair season the law is strictly enforced the same as at other times.

Thus the Stockton paper arraigns the Sacramentans for their moral delinquency, and everybody who is at all familiar with the facts of the case knows that the arraignment is just. Against such long-standing and notorious misdoings it will be of little avail to publish general disclaimers, and protestations against "outrages and false statements of the press."

The press of the State, which has spoken frankly on the subject, has told only a part of the truth. We said at the very outset of this discussion that the moral atmosphere of Sacramento is bad. The case of the State Fair is only a sample instance. For its political turpitude—its attitude of servility to the great monopoly—its choice of representatives who have stood in with every boodle scheme that has popped up in every Legislature—it is equally indictable, because the evil has been allowed to go on unchecked by any popular disapproval or any promise of change for the better.

A local contemporary attempted, the other day, to pool-pooh the idea that the moral atmosphere of Sacramento is worse than that of any other place in the State, and made the singular observation that, even if the aforesaid atmosphere is bad, it could have no effect on a legislature, "which carries its own atmosphere with it." We suppose our complacent contemporary would throw out altogether that aphorism of the Bible which says: "Evil communications corrupt good manners"; at least it would make this principle non-applicable to members of the Legislature.

We hold to our original proposition that Sacramento is not a fit place morally for the seat of our State government; and this indictment, we think, carries even more weight than the other well-founded charges of unwholesome climate and lack of decent accommodations. Sacramento is a sink-hole either way it is considered, and a sink-hole is not the proper place for a capital.

SACRAMENTO is likely to get some good out of her recent shaking up. A project has already been started to build a fine hotel, and one citizen has offered to head the list of subscribers with $10,000. Numerous public improvements, greatly needed and long neglected, are also on the tapis. This ebullience of enterprise reminds one of the good resolutions of the devil when he is sick.

SACRAMENTO is pushing quite a vigorous boycott against its unpopular newspaper, the Bee. It is reported that eighteen leading firms sent in orders the other day for the withdrawal of their advertisements from that paper. There is an evident attempt to make the Bee the scapegoat upon which to lay the sins of the whole community. This looks to us cowardly and pusillanimous. The Bee, through a mistaken policy of sensational journalism, may have committed an offense, but this does not constitute a single one of the substantial reasons for removing the capital of the State. The fault lies with Sacramento as a city. Its ill-adaptation to the purposes of a capital is partially physical, and could not be avoided; and lack of enterprise on the part of Sacramento people is responsible for the failure to ameliorate such unwholesome and disagreeable features as are subject to modification. They should let the responsibility rest where it belongs, upon themselves, and face the music like men. A mean spite visited upon the erring and apologetic Bee will only excite the greater contempt of the rest of the State. As to the Bee, it has been boycotted before, and if now it throws up its hands and refuses to stand its ground we shall have small respect for it. No honest and courageous journal can afford to surrender to mad men with that despicable word "boycott" in their mouths and the club proscriptio in their hands.

It is believed now by many financiers that the United States Treasury has passed the critical point in its gold holdings, and that matters will improve. The Chicago Tribune says: "The cloud of doubt that hangs over the financial situation has a golden lining. The news is more encouraging to those who have feared precipitation to a silver basis, while devoutly hoping to the contrary. Denver offered a million of gold to the treasury, and Chicago five millions, the one in exchange for treasury notes and the other for currency. The gold at command of the Government is otherwise increased by additions at New York and New Orleans. These facts are not more valuable per se than indications of confidence, which cannot but have the effect of inducing a like feeling in the breasts of many who had not entertained it before. The reported argument in the amount of free gold will constitute a reason for thinking it will not be necessary to resort to the proposed issue of bonds in order to meet the $100,000,000 gold reserve and the parity of the currency on a gold basis."

It is reported that since it has been decided to close the World's Fair on Sundays, a move is being made by those employed in the various manufacturing establishments in Chicago and surrounding towns to have the factories run on Sunday and closed on Monday, so that the artisans may be enabled to see the big show without losing a day's work, which many of them cannot afford.

An Irrigation Experiment of Importance Promising Favorably.

A $40,000 Quarter Interest in a Mine—The Southern Pacific to Extend Its Lines to Northern Arizona—A Wonderful Cave.

Special Correspondence of The Times.

Tucson, March 16.—In the Santa Cruz Valley, embracing hundreds of thousands of acres of the very best of land, comparatively little of it irrigated, the water question now bids fair to have an early solution. The Tucson Waterworks Company is now driving a Cook system well-pipe at San Xavier, eight miles up the valley from here, having it now down twenty-two feet.

Already the water has come to the top of the pipe. The hope and expectation of the company is to have the water overflow the pipe, saving the great item of expense of raising the water. Should the experiment be a success, wonderful irrigation possibilities will be opened.

The preliminary survey has been made on the Striped Cañon dam site in Mohave county. The water will be carried out on thousands of acres of fertile land, and the surplus water used to work the immense placers on the east bank of the Colorado River.

Twelve miles of the Nevada Southern Railroad out of Nevada have been completed, and a new town has been started at the present end of the line, which is named Blackburn, in honor of Leroy Blackburn, a wealthy cattleman who resides here. Some of the experiments were made in France looking to the conversion of coal into what is known as "fuel gas," and burning the products under boilers.

Great things were expected by scientific men from this process, but hitherto it has not been found practicable, though many points in its favor have been acknowledged by mechanical engineers, and among the advantages freedom from the smoke nuisance.

Attention has recently been called to the method employed by a boiler-maker on Mission street, San Francisco, in which a considerable attention from those who have given the economical consumption of fuel scientific study.

In the various schemes for burning producer gas great loss has resulted from the fact that the producer has been distasteful to the boiler. In consequence the gas cools while in transit, and this, added to the loss due to the radiation of heat from the sides of the producer itself, has proved a serious drawback.

M. Belmor has overcome this difficulty by making the producer a part of the boiler itself. In other words, he has converted his firebox into a gas-producer, permitting the entry of air sufficiently only to distill the coal. The gaseous product is conducted to the front of the boiler and there mixed with air in a manner not unlike the employment of the Bunsen and Argand burners. The gain in the evaporative efficiency of the coal is said to be fully 30 per cent.

Whether this Californian invention is destined to revolutionize present methods of burning coal, I cannot say. It is certainly the best method of burning coal on the grate-bars of the ordinary boiler is most primitive.

A pound of coal contains so many heat units. Comparatively few of these are utilized, a large number being carried up the chimney by the heavy drafts of air necessary to consume coal when laying in a mass. We all know that when properly mixed with air in considerable quantity illuminating gas can be conveniently and economically used for heating on a small scale. But the process of making gas is expensive. The best use of coal is used and the gas has to be scrubbed and purified. Producer gas, however, is but the dense mass of greenish-yellow smoke resulting from coal distilled in a closed vessel having proper air supply. It can be economically made and used.

If in burning this gas only that amount of air is used which is actually necessary for complete combustion, we have as a result the complete utilization of all the heat units contained in the coal, or at least the closest possible approach to the number theoretically available. Again, by the producer method of firing, coal is put in about every hour instead of every ten minutes, which is generally the case with grate bar firings, when the boiler is being run to its capacity.

Still another point of very important consideration in the use of gas, is the fact that whether low or high-grade coals are used the flues remain clean, thus permitting the flame actual contact with the iron, instead of having to conduct a quarter of an inch of non-conducting soot.

The average price of steam coal in California is 100 per cent. greater than that paid in the Eastern States. To this important item we must add the no less vital one of labor. A large increase in the population may in time decrease the cost of the latter, but the all-important item of high-priced fuel remains. To materially increase the efficiency of all coals is therefore the object to be attained, as upon it, to a considerable degree, depends the future of manufacturing industries in this State.

THE COURTS.

Chinese Gambling Cases Decided by Judge Smith.

The Heathens to Have a New Trial Before the Police Court.

Lena Murray and H. C. Clement Demand Separate Trials.

The San Pedro Fisherman Convicted of Assault to Murder—Divorce Granted. The Cemetery Damage Suit—General Court Notes.

Judge Smith rendered his decision yesterday morning in the cases appealed by Ah Gee and a number of other Chinese gamblers from the Police Court, and ordered that the appellants be granted a new trial in accordance with the following written opinion handed down therein:

The defendants were convicted in the Police Court of the city of Los Angeles of the crime of gaming, in violation of section 330 of the Penal Code. The case was tried by the court without a jury although the defendants did not waive their right to trial by jury.

If defendants were entitled to jury trial their failure to demand a jury does not affect that right; but the request of the defendants to waive a jury in open court, and this must be entered in the docket of the justice, or the right remains. (Secs. 1430 and 1435, P. C.)

The question presented is whether or not the defendants were entitled to trial by jury for a violation of section 330. Our Supreme Court has held that the right to trial by jury is a constitutional right, and is the same as at common law. (Wood vs. Vernon, 85 Cal. 643; People vs. Powell, 87 Cal. 366; Taylor vs. Reynolds, 92 Cal. 573.)

By an act of the Legislature, passed March 1, 1891, entitled "An act to amend an act to provide for police courts in cities having 50,000 or under 100,000 inhabitants," it is provided, among other things, that "in such of the cases enumerated in this section, in which trial by jury is not secured by the Constitution of the State, he may proceed to judgment in the first instance without a jury."

Thus, it will be seen, the question reverts to the proposition as to whether or not the defendants were entitled to a jury trial by the common law. If the offense of gaming was indictable at common law then the defendants were entitled to a trial by jury.

Russell on Crimes (vol. I, p. 322.) (a standard English work) says: "The keeping of a common gaming house, and for lucre and gain, unlawfully causing and procuring divers idle and evil-disposed persons to frequent, and come to play together at a game called rouge et noir, and permitting the said idle and evil-disposed persons to remain playing at the same game for divers large and excessive sums of money, is an indictable offense at common law." Again, "An indictment for keeping a gaming house is an indictment for public nuisance." Again, "There are certain penalties imposed by statutes upon the offense of keeping a common gaming house, and by III Geo. 4 c. 114, hard labor may be added to any imprisonment which the court may award." (See page 323 and numerous authorities cited.)

In the case of the People vs. Jackson (3 Denis, 101) the court says: "The keeping of a common gaming house is indictable at common law." (See also Wharton's Crim. Law, vol. II, sec. 1465.)

Our statute makes the playing or betting equally criminal with the keeping of the house where the game is conducted, all being guilty of the offense of gaming; hence, we conclude that as gaming was indictable at common law, therefore the defendants in this case were entitled to a jury trial, and such right not having been waived, in accordance with section 1435 of the Penal Code, it was error for the Court to try the case without a jury.

For this reason a new trial is awarded to defendants, and it is so ordered.

PLEADED NOT GUILTY.

When Lena Murray and H. C. Clement appeared before Judge Smith yesterday morning to plead to the charge of grand larceny against them, their counsel presented a demurrer, which was by the Court overruled. Each then entered a plea of not guilty and demanded separate trial, whereupon their cases were set for April 6 next.

GUILTY AS CHARGED.

The trial of the case against Giovanni del Aguilera, a San Pedro fisherman, was concluded in Department One yesterday morning, the jury to whom the matter was submitted at 10:20 o'clock returning at 11 o'clock with a verdict of "guilty of an assault with a deadly weapon," whereupon the defendant was ordered to appear for sentence on Tuesday next.

THE CEMETERY DAMAGE SUIT.

The trial of the case of the Los Angeles Cemetery Association vs. the City of Los Angeles, an action for damages, was resumed in Department Four yesterday. At the close of plaintiff's testimony a motion for a non-suit was made by defendant, but denied by the Court, and, after part of defendant's evidence had been put in, the matter went over until Monday.

Court Notes.

Owing to the absence of the defendant, Judge Smith yesterday morning deferred the time in which D. A. Ross was to plead to the charge of rape preferred against him until tomorrow morning.

Judge Smith yesterday morning overruled the demurrer in the C. B. Holmes forgery case, whereupon the defendant entered his plea of not guilty, that he had already been once in jeopardy and that he had already been acquitted, and the case was thereupon set for trial on April 7 next.

Upon complaint of Mrs. Watson yesterday morning Georgia Perkins, a twelve-year-old incorrigible, was ordered committed to the State Reform School at Whittier by Judge Smith for the term of three years.

The defendant in the case of the Arnold Development Company vs. Julius T. Blackman, an action to quiet title to 160 acres of land in sec. 32, T. 6 N., R. 12 W., having allowed the matter to go by default, Judge Clark yesterday morning ordered a decree for the plaintiff therein as prayed for.

In accordance with the recommendation of Drs. Chouteau and Vermilion, the examining commissioners, Judge Clark yesterday committed Miss Honoria B. Marion to the State Asylum for the Insane at Agnew.

Mrs. Gertrude E. Kuh was granted a decree by Judge Clark yesterday divorcing her from Perry V. Kuh, upon the ground of cruelty, by default, and was also allowed to resume her maiden name, Wells.

The case of Clara A. Phelan vs. Mary S. Mosher et al., an action to foreclose a mortgage on two lots in the Mosher tract in Pasadena for $1202.95, came up for hearing before Judge Clark yesterday, and resulted in a decree as prayed for, by default.

The suit instituted by Mrs. Helen Desmond vs. F. M. Murray et al., to quiet her title to lot N. block 147, at Santa Monica, was heard by Judge Clark yesterday, a decree being ordered for plaintiff as prayed for, by default.

The trial of the damage suit instituted by G. A. Pool vs. N. C. Carter, for alleged malicious prosecution, was concluded in Department Three yesterday morning, Judge Wade ordering findings and judgment for the plaintiff therein, his damages being assessed at $75.

Judge Wade partially tried the di-vorice suit of Clara B. Russell vs. R. P. Russell, Jr., yesterday morning, and continued the matter in order to enable plaintiff to procure evidence as to the ability of the defendant to support her. Judge Shaw yesterday morning rendered his decision in the case of C. L. Van Selver vs. Jabez Percival et al., an action for an accounting, findings and judgment being ordered for the defendants therein.

New Suits.

Among the documents filed with the County Clerk yesterday were the preliminary papers in the following new cases:

John Bullock vs. John Taylor et al., suit to recover $15,000 damages for an alleged breach of contract.

Arnold Development Company vs. Mrs. Ida B. Michaels et al., suit to quiet title to 292-62 acres of land in this county.

George R. Elliott vs. W. C. Holmes et al., suit to quiet title to 19.10 acres of land in the Rancho Santa Gertrudes.

Fan vs. J. P. Anaplasa et al., suit to recover $358.40 money loaned to defendant, a minor, or to compel his trustee to mortgage some of his property as security.

DESERTED BY HER HUSBAND.

Left With an Infant on Her Hands and Penniless.

Mrs. Alice Wenk, a prepossessing woman of perhaps thirty-five years of age, sat nearly the whole of yesterday afternoon in the corridor of the police station watching with mournful eyes the playful antics of her three-year-old girl, as she gambled about on the cold, hard floor. The woman had the old story to tell of a wife's devotion and a husband's faithlessness.

She said that her home had formerly been at San Pedro, where she lived happily with her former husband. The latter, while returning one evening from work along a bridge, lost his footing in the dark and fell off the structure, meeting instant death. With her little child, then scarcely more than an infant, she had struggled along in her widow's weeds for some time, finally removing to Santa Barbara, where she fell in with Wenk, who was a barber by trade. The man seemed much struck with her, and after a short courtship the two were married. That was about two months ago. On Wednesday they came down from Santa Barbara and went directly to San Pedro, on a visit returning to this city Thursday. Wenk had ordered all the baggage left at the depot, and engaged rooms for his family on Aliso street.

He stayed with his wife and child during the succeeding night, and seemed as affectionate as ever. Friday evening he went out, telling Mrs. Wenk that he would go and get shaved, and that afterward they would all have dinner. That was the last Mrs. Wenk saw of her husband. She waited until late in the evening without food, hoping that he might come back. That Wenk was unfaithful she could not be made to believe, but when she went to the depot and found his trunk gone, the truth flashed upon her, and she realized that she had been basely deserted. Without a cent of money to buy anything to eat or pay for lodgings, she was obliged to appeal to the police for assistance. Officer Kohn, to whom she related her sad tale, took her to a restaurant and paid for a good meal, after which word was sent to Mrs. Ducommun. The latter secured temporary lodging for the unfortunate woman on Fifth street, until further provision can be made for her.

Wenk has a number of acquaintances in this city. He came here from Arizona about nine months ago, and at that time was known to have a wife and family somewhere out in the Territory. He made application to an attorney shortly after his arrival here to assist him in securing a divorce from wife No. 1, but was informed that he had not resided in the State a sufficient length of time to begin such action. It is thought that the divorce was never obtained, and that the man has now determined to return to his Arizona family.

PLEADED NOT GUILTY.

When Lena Murray and H. C. Clement appeared before Judge Smith yesterday morning to plead to the charge of grand larceny against them, their counsel presented a demurrer, which was by the Court overruled. Each then entered a plea of not guilty and demanded separate trial, whereupon their cases were set for April 6 next.

GUILTY AS CHARGED.

The trial of the case against Giovanni del Aguilera, a San Pedro fisherman, was concluded in Department One yesterday morning, the jury to whom the matter was submitted at 10:20 o'clock returning at 11 o'clock with a verdict of "guilty of an assault with a deadly weapon," whereupon the defendant was ordered to appear for sentence on Tuesday next.

THE CEMETERY DAMAGE SUIT.

The trial of the case of the Los Angeles Cemetery Association vs. the City of Los Angeles, an action for damages, was resumed in Department Four yesterday. At the close of plaintiff's testimony a motion for a non-suit was made by defendant, but denied by the Court, and, after part of defendant's evidence had been put in, the matter went over until Monday.

Court Notes.

Owing to the absence of the defendant, Judge Smith yesterday morning deferred the time in which D. A. Ross was to plead to the charge of rape preferred against him until tomorrow morning.

Judge Smith yesterday morning overruled the demurrer in the C. B. Holmes forgery case, whereupon the defendant entered his plea of not guilty, that he had already been once in jeopardy and that he had already been acquitted, and the case was thereupon set for trial on April 7 next.

Upon complaint of Mrs. Watson yesterday morning Georgia Perkins, a twelve-year-old incorrigible, was ordered committed to the State Reform School at Whittier by Judge Smith for the term of three years.

The defendant in the case of the Arnold Development Company vs. Julius T. Blackman, an action to quiet title to 160 acres of land in sec. 32, T. 6 N., R. 12 W., having allowed the matter to go by default, Judge Clark yesterday morning ordered a decree for the plaintiff therein as prayed for.

In accordance with the recommendation of Drs. Chouteau and Vermilion, the examining commissioners, Judge Clark yesterday committed Miss Honoria B. Marion to the State Asylum for the Insane at Agnew.

Mrs. Gertrude E. Kuh was granted a decree by Judge Clark yesterday divorcing her from Perry V. Kuh, upon the ground of cruelty, by default, and was also allowed to resume her maiden name, Wells.

The case of Clara A. Phelan vs. Mary S. Mosher et al., an action to foreclose a mortgage on two lots in the Mosher tract in Pasadena for $1202.95, came up for hearing before Judge Clark yesterday, and resulted in a decree as prayed for, by default.

The suit instituted by Mrs. Helen Desmond vs. F. M. Murray et al., to quiet her title to lot N. block 147, at Santa Monica, was heard by Judge Clark yesterday, a decree being ordered for plaintiff as prayed for, by default.

The trial of the damage suit instituted by G. A. Pool vs. N. C. Carter, for alleged malicious prosecution, was concluded in Department Three yesterday morning, Judge Wade ordering findings and judgment for the plaintiff therein, his damages being assessed at $75.

Judge Wade partially tried the di-

CAN YOU SING?

We Are Selling Clothing for a Song.

Of course you will understand that this is only a figure of speech, but it expresses the fact that we are marking our new spring goods at very popular prices. It would be impossible for us to say too much in praise of our choice selections, and in praising our own wares we do not by any means wish to claim that our competitors are not also showing handsome goods. He is a foolish merchant indeed who will underestimate his competitors—we do not. But knowing full well that competition is keen, makes us all the more careful in our selections, and we know that if we expect to gain your trade our prices must be right. If you wish to see a real pretty display of spring styles, kindly notice our windows this week. You will find they compare with the displays of much larger cities.

We are showing an entire new line of mother's friend waists, and the patterns are very pretty. We have waists from 25c up;

also blouse waists.

Our stock of Kilt Suits is now ready for your inspection. Pretty styles for $4.00 & $5.00

The Vestie Suit for little boys is still popular. For the larger boys we show the new double-breasted suit. We also have boys' reefers, and we have just received a number of new spring cape overcoats for boys, ages 3 to 14, our own designs. Our boys' department is complete

When you are ready for your spring suit for yourself, or your boy, it will pay you to visit our establishment.

HIGHLAND EVAPORATED CREAM!

Established, HIGHLAND, ILL., 1885.
Branch Factory CEDAR RAPIDS, IA., 1892.

$5000.00

To the Trade and Consumers:

To assure you that the claims made by manufacturers of inferior brands of Evaporated Cream, now in this market, are misrepresentations, the makers of the Highland Evaporated Cream will give $5000 to any one who can prove that any imitation of their Evaporated Cream is equal to the Original Highland. The enormous success of the

Highland Brand EVAPORATED CREAM

Induced other manufacturers to adopt the words "Evaporated Cream," which we originally selected for our goods and have used for years, but under the laws of our land we cannot copyright same. These imitators not having nerve enough to start in on their own foundation and build a trade for it has taken out years of honest work to do, proceeded to imitate us in every possible manner, supposing by the use of these imitation methods they could more easily steal our trade; but as they have not succeeded at any point we are perfectly satisfied that the consumers here, wanting the best and only reliable, will insist on HIGHLAND.

C. W. BUCK, General Agent.

To Physicians:

The nonsensical assertion made by one of our imitators, that by their process they render the casein in milk more digestible than it is in the Highland Brand, is simply one of their misrepresentations, and to convince you that this statement by them is UTTERLY FALSE, the makers of the

Again publicly announce that they will give $5000 to any one who can prove that any one of these imitations is equal to the Original Highland in digestibility.

We again say that the Highland Evaporated Cream is now, and has been for seven years, the only perfectly sterilized milk in THE WORLD, and as such, was awarded the Gold Medal at the World's Exposition in Paris, 1889. As you well know, there are only two ways of preserving milk in cans; first, by using sugar; second, by complete sterilization. Of the two, the latter is the better and is only present in the Highland; this being the fact, Highland is the only Perfect Food for Infants and Invalids.

The penitential period is nearing its close, and during the first week in April the bonnets that bloom in the spring will be out in all their beauty. With the multitude of millinery openings which have taken place during the past week the soul of woman has been deeply perplexed, for it isn't such an easy thing after all to select one's Easter bonnet. There are all styles, sizes, shapes and colors to choose from, with a leaning toward broader brims in hats, heliotrope shades in colors, and mixed straws, some of them tinted in such exquisite colorings as to make it seem a crime to cover them with ribbons and flowers.

The past week, therefore, has been a busy one for fashionables, with Easter bonnet openings, auction sales of Oriental rugs and hangings, and with Ward and James playing Shakespeare's grand old dramas nightly at the Operahouse, there has been little time for gossip.

Every one hereabouts who contemplates going East this season seems determined to go early, and during the "merrie month of May" many Angelenos will turn their faces toward Chicago and the World's Fair.

AN AFTERNOON AT HOME.

One of the recherché events of the past week was the at home given by Miss Alden of West Twenty-third street, in honor of her sisters, Mrs. Shaw and Mrs. Charles Alden, from the East. The guests were invited to spend the afternoon, and each lady brought some dainty bit of needlework. A colored quartette furnished the music; the rooms were bright and fragrant with flowers, and each guest wore a corsage bouquet of purple and white violets, with ferns—a delicate attention on the part of the hostess.

Among the guests were: Mrs. Margaret Hughes, Mrs. T. D. Stimson, Mrs. Willard Stimson, Mrs. Vosburg, Mrs. Dan McFarland, Misses Caswell, Trout, Shoemaker, Butler, Chaffee, Charles, Silent, Fred C. Howes, S. P. Hunt, Edgar Swain, Mrs. Charles Ellis and many others.

MAYER-GROSSER.

Last Wednesday evening the marriage of Miss Amelia Grosser of this city to Edmund Mayer of San Diego was celebrated at the residence of the bride's parents, No. 400 East Fifth street. The bride is the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William F. Grosser, and the groom is a prominent druggist of San Diego. The residence was tastefully decorated with a profusion of flowers and greens, and presented a gay and festive appearance.

The guests were entertained with music until the arrival of the bride and groom, when the orchestra rendered Wagner's wedding march from Lohengrin, as the bride party entered the parlors, led by Miss El. Grosser as the maid of honor and the Misses E. Niemeyer, B. Penning and R. Schutte as bridesmaids. The happy couple took their stations beneath a handsome floral wedding veil. The bride looked charming in her costume of cream-colored, brocaded India silk and wreath of fragrant orange blossoms.

The ceremony was performed in a very impressive manner by Judge W. P. Wade, who preceded the tying of the knot by a few pertinent remarks, after which the Judge launched the happy couple upon the sea of matrimony. Congratulations and good wishes were showered upon them from all sides, including a number of congratulatory telegrams from friends of the groom in San Diego. The party then repaired to the dining-room, where over a hundred sat down to a very enjoyable supper, during which toasts were offered by F. Gottchalk to the health and happiness of the young couple; by J. Ashman, to the parents of the bride, it being the thirty-first anniversary of their wedded life. Near the conclusion of the banquet all present were surprised by a serenade by the singing section of the Turnverein. After rendering several selections, to the delight of the company, they were invited to take part in the festivities. The guests then returned to the parlors, where they were entertained with music. The bride rendered in a most exquisite manner a vocal solo, "Stella Copulante," with violin obligato by George Grosser, and accompanied by Prof. T. W. Wilde. The groom gave a masterly rendition of a poem entitled "No Fatherland," Miss Bertha Penning then sang a solo in her usual charming style, after which dancing was inaugurated and participated in until the small hours of the morning, when the guests departed. Handsome and costly presents were showered from friends far and near, showing the esteem in which they are held. Among those present were Messrs. and Mrs. G. Brode, H. Puck, L. Roeder, W. F. Grosser, H. Glass, F. Vogel, Otto Vogel, T. W. Wilde, Theo. Friese, H. Bruning, A. Steinkne, F. Felner, F. G. Penning, M. Hartroig, E. Ashman, M. Kuhn, E. Paine, K. Mimmey, E. Mimmey, D. Holst, E. Grosser, M. Perry and R. Shutte; Judge W. P. Wade and Messrs. W. Haas, P. Paine, H. Clauson, Fruhling, Capt. Wede, A. Brauer, Theo. Staasforth, V. Wankowski, J. H. Owens, George Grosser, A. Grosser, W. A. Grosser, Prof. A. J. Stamm, L. Brier, G. Schutte, W. Breer, W. Legon, Jr., Butler and Prof. J. Willey.

SURPRISE PARTY.

A very pleasant surprise party was tendered Mrs. B. J. Cook at her residence, No. 1421 Brooklyn avenue, on Wednesday evening last in honor of her birthday. The evening was most enjoyably spent with music, singing, recitations by Miss Williams and Miss Rose Egerer, by way of entertainment. Refreshments were served, and after that dancing was kept up until a late hour. Those present included Mr. and Mrs. B. J. Cooke, Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Wise, Mr. and Mrs. M. G. Gonzalez, and Mrs. Ed Gansh, Mr. and Mrs. J. Thornton, Mr. and Mrs. Al. Dillon, Mr. and Mrs. Stuart, Mrs. Deitz, Mrs. Maxey, Mrs. Charles Spencer, Mrs. O. Man, the Misses Grace and Edith Stuart, Ella Jolland, Josie Williams, Jennie and Tessie Cooke, Leona and Rosa Egerer, Fannie Green, Lizzie Hartnett, Messrs. L. Cronix, Frank Foster, E. Morey, George O'Donald, Fred Martinez, John Maxey, P. Hartnett, Mr. Stuart.

THE DRAMATIC CLUB.

The Dramatic Club No. 2 presented the sparkling drama, Among the Breakers, last evening at O. Stewart Taylor's School of Music and Drama, to a large audience, with the following cast: David Murray.....O. J. Mendelhall
Hon. Bruce Hunter.....C. G. Bartell
Clarence Hunter.....Claude Friel
Peter Paragaph.....Mr. Parker
Said.....George Kennedy
Miss Munnery Dene.....Miss Lillie Miller
Bess Starbright.....Miss Hulda Thompson
Mother Carey.....Mrs. L. F. Morrison
Bliss Beane.....Miss Blanche Heath
The marriage did well, and proved to the audience the efficient instruction of the talented elocutionist, Mrs. Morrison.

PLEASANT SURPRISE.

Mr. and Mrs. G. Wesley Craner, No. 226 East Twelfth street, were in receipt of a most pleasant surprise given them by their friends. It being their first evening at home to their friends since their marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Craner were presented with many elegant presents from friends and relatives. Among the many was an elegant silver water pitcher, presented by Angelena Circle 106, Companions of the Forest. Mrs. Wesner, the Chief Companion, made the presentation speech, after which those present were invited into their dining hall, where supper was spread. The party then proceeded to the parlor, where a flash-light picture was taken of all present.

AN EASTER WEDDING BREAKFAST.

Here is an idea for an Easter wedding breakfast which is very chic: The table, covered with heavy white damask; the china, white, with delicate decoration of green. A linen center-piece with a border of drawn-work, and embroidered in fern leaves with faint shades of green wash-silks, outlined with silver thread. High cut-glass vases, in silver standards, holding bunches of lilies. Silver chandelabra, with white candles and silk shades in lily form. At each plate a few sprays of lilies of the valley, tied carefully together with bow-knot of silver cord. Suspended from the ceiling by wires, horizontally over the entire length of the table, like an arbor, the very newest decoration, a floral ladder, its sides and rungs wound with smooch and fringed with feathery asparagus of the top heaped with lily stalks, their blossoms falling between and over the edge.

About the room upon mantel, sideboard and every available place, bowls filled with lilies, after the old-time posy-pot fashion.

The ices served in calla blossoms with a bow of green ribbon, with long ends, tied upon the stems. The pistils of the flowers, replaced by a piece of some oily nut, which, lighted, burns brightly when served to the guests.

Could anything be more exquisite than this wedding feast? The young bride surrounded by a girlish throng of sweetness and beauty, the happy groom, fond friends and this beautiful service of lilies.

DELIGHTFUL PARTY.

Mrs. E. P. Rice gave another one of her delightful parties, at her home in Aurora, Friday evening, in honor of her niece, Miss Alice Parsons of New Jersey, who recently came here to spend a year. The house was beautifully decorated for the occasion. One of the amusing features of the evening was for each young man to trim a hat for a young lady, and each young lady to make a necktie out of raw material for a young man. There was some fine vocal and instrumental music rendered by different young ladies, after which refreshments were served. Among those present were Misses Martha Dodswordh, Alice Parsons of New Jersey, Annie Healey, Misses DeVon, May Juden, Ina Keaves, Blanche DeVon, Grace Cook, Lillie Quick, Stella Cook, Daniels, Wade, Clyde Alkman; Messrs. V. M. Greeves, Dr. Rice, Charlie Dodswordh, C. V. Cain, J. D. Sharp, H. Headley, Fuber, Hall, Robert, J. Harry Morrissey.

AN ENJOYABLE AFFAIR.

Friday evening a very pleasant party was given by the Young People's Society of the Central Christian Church at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Bell, corner of Eleventh and Hill streets. Among those present were Miss Kate Standefer, Mr. and Mrs. Budinger, F. W. Robinson, Miss Maud Perry, the Misses Burton, Mrs. A. Ford, M. Leightenheimer, J. Burton, Miss Yecera, L. T. Lowrey, Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Richey, Misses Lizzie Standefer, Harper, Barter, Clara Owen, Bertha Owen, Elva Standefer, Mr. and Mrs. A. Holst, Mrs. White, E. Holst, Mrs. M. W. Barrett, Mrs. Wade, Mrs. Walters, L. Anderson, the Misses Holst.

HE MAKES ELEGANT GUM.

W. G. Hill of Elkhart, Ind., is visiting his brother-in-law, H. S. Rollins, and family in this city. Mr. Hill is of the Jones & Hill Company, manufacturers of chewing gum, and is making an extended tour of the Southern States and California in the interest of his company, which is one of the most extensive of its kind in the United States.

A PLEASANT ENTERTAINMENT. A very pleasant entertainment is promised on the evening of the 27th inst. by Miss Carrie S. Rudolph, the character impersonator, who will appear at the Y.M.C.A. auditorium under the auspices of the Woman's Auxiliary to the Y.M.C.A.

SOCIAL BRIEVITIES.

Mr. and Mrs. Dean Mason have returned from their six weeks' bridal trip to Honolulu, and are at the residence of the groom's father, Mr. George Mason, corner Grand avenue and Adams street. Miss Blackstock, daughter of Atterney Blackstock of Ventura, who has been the guest of Miss Pease on Hill street, left Friday for Colton to officiate as bridesmaid at the wedding of the marriage of her friend, Miss Emma Pittenger.

Capt. W. H. Jordan and wife of Des Moines, Iowa, are in the city for a visit, stopping at the Clifton, on Broadway.

Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Willard, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wigmore, who left Colton yesterday to visit the Citrus Fair.

Mrs. M. Burton Williamson of University has an article on "Clementia Subdiphana in San Pedro Bay" in the Nautilus, a conchological magazine published at the Philadelphia Academy of Sciences.

Mrs. Stringham of Berkeley, wife of Prof. Stringham, with her children, has come to Los Angeles for an extended visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Roger S. Day.

Mrs. W. G. Cochran has gone East, to be absent till the latter part of June. Mr. H. Jevne and family will leave for Chicago about May 1.

The Signal Corps of the First Brigade, N.G.C., is to give a dress ball April 7, which bids fair to eclipse any like affair yet given.

Corey, J. K. Gill, Miss Gill and Dorothy Gill of Portland, Or., are at the Figueroa Hotel.

Mrs. Nind, who has been at Mrs. D. C. Cook's on Figueroa street, left Wednesday for Tulare, where she will speak on Sunday, March 19.

Edgar Marvin who has been playing small parts with the Ward-James combination the last week here, is a nephew of the Hon. Charles N. Felton, ex-Senator from California, and son of the late Hon. Edgar Marvin, who, for many years was United States Vice-consul for British Columbia. Many Californians know and remember "Beacon Lodge." Edgar Marvin has gone to Redondo Beach to pass Sunday with the Almsworths.

F. W. Kimble and wife of Grangeville, Cal., are in the city for a few weeks, visiting J. O. Kimble of No. 1011 South Hill street.

Froebel Society.

The Los Angeles Froebel Society held its regular monthly meeting on Wednesday evening last at 2:30 o'clock. The programme consisted of a lesson on the "Cube of the Second Gift," by Miss Betts; one on the "Third Gift" by Mrs. Mahew, and one on "Sticks" by Mrs. Winslow. The lessons being full of bright, practical ideas, were thoroughly enjoyed by all present. The next meeting will be held April 12 at 2:30 p.m. in the music hall on Fifth street, between Olive and Grand avenues. All kindergartners and others interested are cordially invited to attend.

MUSIC AND MUSICIANS.

Both the opera and local musical performances seem to have given way during the past week to the charms of Shakespearean drama. The only public musical events of the week were the Y.M.C.A. concert on Wednesday evening and the formal opening on Monday evening of O. Stewart Taylor's School of Music and Drama at No. 618 South Broadway. Acts I and II of The Chimes of Normandy were presented admirably in addition to the regular concert programme.

HAYDN'S ORATORIO.

The concert to be given this week in the First Congregational Church, is one of wide popular interest. It is the first attempt in this city for many years to give oratorio music on a worthy scale. Haydn's famous oratorio The Creation, will be rendered by a chorus of 100 voices, led by Prof. Bacon, and by the prominent soloists, Miss Miltimore, Modini-Wood and Heir. Robt. assisted by an orchestra of twenty pieces, led by Prof. H. E. Hamilton. Mrs. Carver will preside at the piano, and Mr. Mason, organist of the Immanuel Church, at the organ.

It is believed that the concert will do much to elevate the standard of music in this city, and to stimulate a popular love for the masterpieces of sacred musical composition.

CHILDREN'S MUSICALS.

A delightful musicale was given on Saturday afternoon at the residence of Judge Chapman. The programme was made up from the classical and romantic compositions specially composed for children, and the little daughters of Mmes. Chapman and Hendricks were the performers. Miss Harriet Strong of Whittier, their teacher, holding the thread of the whole by her charming explanations of follia, rondo, minuet, and the rest of the older school, and their modern supplanted from Jensen and Chopin.

The house was redolent of violets, and youth and pleasure were hand-in-hand as the happy children had their own afternoon of entertaining young and old friends.

MUSICAL RECITAL AT THE OCCIDENTAL COLLEGE.

The pupils of the Misses Rider at Occidental College were organized last fall into an orchestra, consisting of several violins, a viola, a cello, a double bass, piano, etc., and yesterday afternoon they gave their first recital in the college building.

The young people performed their parts in such a manner as to reflect great credit upon themselves and their teachers. Miss Thompson made an appearance on the stage and handled her bow with coquettish grace. The solos by Alphonzo Bell, Charles Clay and Benton Longwitz were also good. The orchestral selections were well rendered and the closing duo was one of the best numbers on the programme.

A University in the Home.

A college education has ceased to be a luxury. It is now an absolute necessity to every young man who would enter upon life with an unclouded prospect.

Talk as one may about the superfluity of higher education, it cannot be gainsaid that its absence makes a successful man's progress less pleasant, even if it does not impede it very seriously. There is no young man who would refuse the opportunities of university study if he could get it. But of course it costs money. You cannot enjoy the privileges of such an institution unless you can afford to pay liberally for them.

Why not set up a university in your own home?

It can be done, and at an expense so trifling as to set up no more than a library. The expense consists of an outlay of 10 cents a day for a short time only. Some years ago many eminent teachers were paid a high price to write down in plain language all that was known of the branch of learning that each teacher had made his own. Thus the great mathematician was to write down plainly and succinctly the great truths of mathematics. The historian wrote of history and the geographer of the countries of the world. And so with every branch of human knowledge.

These great teachers labored for years and finally completed their task. The result was gathered together in logical order and printed in clear, plain type and illustrated with beautifully clear engravings as an assistance to the memory and to vivify the text. The whole was strongly and neatly bound. Then it was given to that portion of the world who could afford to pay a high price for the wonderful work, which was called the Encyclopedia Britannica.

SHOT HIMSELF.

Suicide of a Boston Architect, Well Known in This City.

Samuel J. F. Thayer, well known in this city as the architect who prepared the plans for the Tenth-street hotel, which, unfortunately, never got above the foundation, committed suicide in Boston, February 28, by shooting himself through the temple. The Boston Globe of that date gives the following account of the tragedy:

Samuel J. F. Thayer, a well-known architect of this city, committed suicide at 10:30 o'clock this morning by shooting in the head in his apartments at No. 12 Worcester Square.

Mr. Thayer had been in ill-health for some time, and for the past week his broken-hearted wife says, had been very despondent, and had several times told her that it would be better if he were out of the way.

It is understood that Mr. Thayer was owed quite a sum of money by different parties, and it is thought it preyed upon his mind because of the difficulty of collecting it.

Mrs. Thayer was utterly prostrated by the shock. As far as can be learned the affair happened as follows: Both Mr. and Mrs. Thayer were in the bedroom of their apartments at about 10:30, when Mr. Thayer asked his wife to prepare him a cup of coffee. She went out into the kitchen for that purpose, and in a very few moments returned to the bed-chamber, where she made the terrible discovery.

As she entered the door she saw her husband with his back toward her, sitting in a chair and apparently leaning over toward the door, and in response to her cry, started her, and she hurried to him with the question, "Why, what is the matter?" Then it was that she saw the revolver grasped in his right hand, and blood flowing from a ragged hole in his right temple.

At that moment the provision man with whom the Thayers traded knocked on the door, and in response to Mrs. Thayer's cry, "Taking in the situation at the moment he removed the body to a couch and immediately telephoned the City Hospital for a physician.

A doctor responded and ordered the body removed to the City Hospital. Nothing, however, could be done, as death must have resulted from the well-aimed bullet almost instantly.

All the surroundings indicated that the deed was premeditated. Mr. Thayer was waylaid and sandbagged in January, from the effects of which he had never recovered.

The Hungry Crowds That Haunt the White House.

How President Cleveland Receives Them.

A Look into the Blue Book—Office Applications by Mail.

Hundreds of Thousands Awaiting Action—Stories of Office-seekers and the President—Cleveland and Harrison Compared.

What Clarkson Said About Harrison—Some of Andrew Jackson's Experiences—How a Boarding-house Woman Collected a Note—The Troubles of Presidents—Tom Corwin on Office-seeking, Etc.

Special Correspondence of The Times.

WASHINGTON, March 18, 1893.—Washington is full of office-seekers. They crowd the hotels, they fill up the boarding-houses and you meet them in the corridors of the great departments and in the lower halls of the White House. The civil service rules seem to make no difference in their demands and President Cleveland has to send away a large number of them every day. His experience during his last administration enables him to dispose of them with refreshing rapidity. He has fixed hours for his receptions and such as get past the clerks and his private secretary are given a short audience and are sometimes turned down with a word. The President does business rapidly. He is a good judge of men and he knows the office-seeking type at a glance. He does not receive office-seekers until about 10 o'clock, though they begin to come much earlier. They hand in their cards to the doorkeepers and take seats in the ante-room. At about 10 o'clock President Cleveland is ready to have them admitted. He moves about the room from one man to the other and often leads one of his callers to the center of the room and talks with him in such a low tone that he can't be heard by the others sitting around. Not infrequently he rests himself against his desk as he talks, half sitting on the corner of it, and he disposes of many cases without even taking the papers which each office-seeker brings with him.

OFFICES WHICH WILL BE CHANGED.

I can't itemize the number of offices which are open to change at the present. The civil service rules, as rigid as they seem, are very flexible if the President wants to make them so, and there is hardly one of the 150,000 Blue Book in the Government which could not be changed if President Cleveland desired it. There are something like twenty thousand clerks right here in Washington, and the number increases every year. There is a fat book known as the Blue Book, which is made up of a dictionary and it gives every salary in the Government service. The Blue Book can be gotten at through a Congressman, and it is made for private circulation. Each Senator and each member has two, and there is one in the hands of each prominent Government official. I understand that a private Blue Book has been lately published which tells all about the offices, their salaries and their duties, and this is being quietly distributed about among those who will pay a good price for it. It is largely made up from the official Blue Book of the Blue Book proper there are only about two thousand copies extra printed, and this book is in the proportion to the circulation one of the costliest volumes in existence. It costs over $16,000 to set the type, and it would take a good typesetter ten years to set it.

OFFICE-SEEKING LETTERS.

Speaking of office-seekers, the mail has rapidly increased in all the departments at Washington during the past month. The letters of the appointment clerks are brought in by bags and the office-seeking applications come in by the tens of thousands. This appointment clerk of the Treasury has a score of clerks who do little else than take care of this mail, and in the pigeon holes of this office hundreds of thousands of papers and letters are now piled away, carefully indexed and briefed and ready for use and reference, in case the men named in them get an appointment. It is the same in the Postoffice Department, and I was told not long ago that there were something like four hundred thousand applications in one of the departments here at Washington awaiting action. The postoffice applicants usually send voluminous papers, and a hundred-dollar-a-year job often has more papers connected with it than one of the big civil postal appointments. The candidates send in their papers and recommendations. They have petitions signed by the citizens of their towns, and it takes a large number of clerks to put these into shape for Postmaster-General Bissell. When a case comes up the Postmaster-General wants a brief of it ready for him, and he takes this brief with him to the White House if it is an appointment that the President has to consider. An absolute civil service would, in fact, largely reduce the work of the departments, and it will surprise many to know that in some of the offices under the Government it requires the services of one man day in and day out to open the mail.

STORIES OF OFFICE-SEEKERS.

Public men have learned to know that President Cleveland decides matters for himself, and the Democratic Senators and Representatives exhibit a great deal less confidence than they did eight years ago. I remember how an Alabama delegation called at the White House in 1885 with a list of appointments in their hands and thought that they would carry away all the offices of that State at one visit. President Cleveland received them and asked what he could do for them. Their leader replied: "Mr. President, we have agreed upon the names of the offices for Alabama. We represent the State, and we are in perfect harmony. We would like these appointments made as soon as possible, and here is the list."

Cleveland looked at the leader for a moment. He then moved his eyes slowly around over the rest of the delegation, and as he scanned the list, he said: "Gentlemen, if your attention has not yet been called to the tenure of office act and the civil service law, permit me to ask you to look at it." And with that he dismissed the delegation. Some of the men recommended were appointed and others were not.

Some of the older Senators and members who had been accustomed to bossing their districts were very much offended at the way Cleveland made his appointments, and not a few of them carry their resentments with them to-day. You remember how Andrew G. Curtin, the famous war Governor of Pennsylvania, called one day on Cleveland's Assistant Postmaster-General. He wanted to have a country postmaster removed, and he told the postal official that he had a Democrat to appoint in that place.

"But," said the Assistant Postmaster-General, "there are no charges against this man. He is a Republican, and I want him turned out. I want the place for a Democrat."

"But I can't do that, Governor," I must have some other charge than that of Republicanism, or I have got to have a charge made by a reputable person."

"Well, I'll file charges myself," said Gov. Curtin. "You take your pen and write them down."

"All right," said Mr. Hay, and he began to follow the Governor.

The incumbent called President Cleveland bad names.

"He did?" was the reply; "why, that's bad."

"When you were appointed," Gov. Curtin went on, "he said you were a damned copperhead."

"That's worse," said the official, laughing as he wrote.

"And, third and last, he called me bad names," said Gov. Curtin. "Now, isn't that enough?"

"I think it is," was the reply, "and I will order his removal."

This same experience was had by a dozen prominent men during Cleveland's last administration, but many of them did not get their appointments as did Curtin.

CLEVELAND'S HONESTY.

There is one thing about Cleveland's treatment of office-seekers. He never tells a man he is going to give him a position when he has no idea of carrying out his promise, and few people leave the White House with a wrong impression in this regard. On the other hand, when he wants to give a man an office and expects to favor him he tells him so, and he makes no effort to do so. It was different with President Harrison. He never seemed to like to grant a favor, and even after he had decided to give a man what he wanted he would let him go away with the idea that his application was rejected. He would make no effort to do so. It was different with President Harrison. He never seemed to like to grant a favor, and even after he had decided to give a man what he wanted he would let him go away with the idea that his application was rejected. He would make no effort to do so.

Clarkson got to dislike Harrison very much before he left the postoffice. His generous nature and kindly soul was the reverse of that of his chief, and I remember that one day he came into my office with a bundle of papers in his hand. He had been up to see the President about some postal appointments. As we chatted together he picked up the papers and said: "President Harrison is the queerest man I have ever met. I have been at the White House talking with him about some offices which were to be given to his friends. I knew that the men who were to have the offices were his friends, and I had selected them with that view. As he looked over the appointments he found some objections to each of them, and at last I drew myself up in my chair to his surprise, and said to him: "Mr. President, you are the queerest character I have ever met. Why, it seems to me you grudge to do a favor for a friend. I don't understand it. It always makes me happy to oblige my friends, but it seems to make you miserable to do likewise."

He wanted Gen. Jackson's pipe.

PRESIDENTS AND OFFICE-HOLDERS.

It is funny to note how offices have been gotten in the past. Cleveland cannot be flattered very easily, but some of the best offices of other administrations have been secured this way. Andrew Jackson gave a great many to his friends, and office-seekers are the greatest toadies in existence. One day, during Jackson's administration, a man called at the White House and found Jackson smoking an old clay pipe. He began to talk of tobacco, and, after he had discussed the weed for a few moments, he said: "Mr. President, I want to ask a favor of you."

"And what place is that?" said Jackson, frowning as he saw what he had thought to be a friendly call change into an office-seeking visit.

"Ah," replied the cringing office-seeker, "I am not an applicant for a position. At least not now, but my good father is as fond of tobacco as you are, and he told me when I came to Washington to tell you it would be the proudest day of his life if he could have a present from you of one of your pipes."

Jackson thereupon ordered the servant to bring him a fresh pipe, and offered this to the visitor. The office-seeker refused it, and said: "No, Mr. President, let me have the one you are smoking. Give me just as it is, with the ashes smoking within it, and you will receive the everlasting thanks of my dear father."

Jackson handed him the pipe, and the man wrapped it up in a silk handkerchief, and, saying "Oh, thank you, thank you," and bowed himself out.

Old Hickory received him kindly, and, as she told her story, his eyes snapped. When she was through he requested her to go back and get the clerk's note for the entire amount that was due her. She replied that his note was not good and that it would only entail the cost of a protest. President Jackson assured her that this time there should be no such expense, but said that she must bring the note over to the White House. She did so, and the President took it and wrote on the back "Andrew Jackson."

"Now, madam," said he, "put that in the bank and we will take the clerk or I will have to pay you that money."

When the clerk saw the note he was scared half to death. He paid it instantly, and then went to the White House and promised Jackson that he would reform.

THE TROUBLES OF PRESIDENTS.

President Cleveland is having less trouble with the office-seekers than any of his predecessors. His action during his first term has helped him to dispose of them. President Harrison never allowed office-seekers to bother him, and the civil service examinations have scared off a good many. President William Henry Harrison was worried to death by the office-seekers, and when Zach Taylor was nominated a troop of office-seekers followed him on his way to Washington, and one of them actually slipped his application into Zach's pantaloons pocket without his knowing it. They worried him almost to death after he got there, and it has been the same with all the Presidents down to Cleveland. General Grant was killed by an office-seeker, and it was an office-holder who pulled Andrew Jackson's nose. James Buchanan had a way of taking a man's papers, and chatting to him about other subjects in such a friendly manner that he was sure he was going to get his place. Gen. Grant often promised appointments that were never given, and his drafts were not always honored by his Cabinet ministers. Postmaster-General Jewell, it is said, once told an applicant who brought a recommendation from the Secretary of the Treasury but little of this matter, and that he was running the Postoffice Department.

TOM CORWIN ON OFFICE-SEEKING.

Speaking of recommendations, one of the queerest cases I ever heard of was that relating to Tom Corwin, who was Secretary of the Treasury. He had been in Congress before this and had given out letters of recommendation to office-seekers rather freely. Among others he gave one to a man for a place in the Treasury Department. The man took it and failed to get the appointment. When Corwin was appointed Secretary of the Treasury he bobbed up serenely and asked for a place. "What recommendations have you?" said Corwin.

"I have this," was the reply, and the man thereupon put before the Secretary of the Treasury his own indorsement, which was signed, "Tom Corwin."

"And did this not get you an appointment under the former Secretary?" asked Mr. Corwin.

"No," was the reply, "it did not."

"Well, if it was strong enough to get you a place then, why don't you get a general Tom? I don't think it ought to be strong enough to give you a place now," and he refused to give the man the place. Corwin always tried to persuade young men from entering the Government departments. He said they were the worst places in the world for young men, and he advised one man who called upon him, while he was Secretary of the Treasury, to get an ax and a mallet and put up a log cabin rather than take a Government office. Said he: "I can give you a place today and I can take it away tomorrow. And there is another man over there at the White House who can kick me out, and the people by and by can kick him out, and so it goes. But if you own an acre of land it is your kingdom and your cabin is your castle. You are a sovereign, and you will feel it in every throbbing of your pulse, and every day of your life will assure me of your thanks for this advice."

It was so with old Senator Chase, who, when Salmon P. Chase, afterward Chief Justice, asked for a Government office, told him he would give him a dollar to buy him a spade to go out and dig for a living, but that he would not ruin him by putting him into the employ of the United States.

This is the same today. There is no worse place in the world for a young man than the Government offices of Washington. The clerks, after a time, become pure machines, and there is less snap, energy and get-up-and-go inside those great Government departments than there is anywhere in the American continent outside of the West India Islands.

EUGENE FIELD.

The Man as He Appears at Home.

A Friend of All Sorts and Conditions of Men.

Simple and Entirely Natural and Altogether Generous.

His Pleasant Home at Chicago—What One Sees in His Private "Den"—Something About His Literary Work.

Specially Contributed to The Times.

CHICAGO, March 7.—The little drawing-room of the Field house, on the North Side, in Chicago, looks like Mrs. Field. It is pretty, and dainty, and modern, and homelike. It is sweet and sufficient—when Mr. Field is not there. When he is it becomes a background. Mr. Field is of the size and personality to create backgrounds. He can make one out of almost anything—material or human. He is a surprise. One of the few surprises left. There never has been a portrait or a picture of him that would cause him to be recognized one inch beyond the limit of his own acquaintance. All of his photographs are ridiculously old, or insipidly young. He has no age. There could go into no photograph the solemn light of his big gray eyes—or the long body with the look of aboriginal strength, the long head and the mouth that is only saved from being pathetic by the look of being able to take care of his own affairs. Mr. Field's personality expresses his poetry. He is simple and entirely natural, and altogether generous. There has never formed upon his mind, or heart, or manner, anything of the crust of conventionality.

He writes for children because he has kept unimpaired his larger growth of experience and knowledge. He never loses his child's heart and soul and delicacy of perception. His poetry touches everybody, because he puts his finger on the pulse of humanity. He makes poetry of not the ephemeral fashions of thought, but of the fundamental things which guard the race and give it its life.

Field is about 40 years old, counting by years, and his face is smooth and long, and his hair is thin and blonde. He is over 6 feet tall and broad shouldered. You look at him and think that almost anything could have been made out of him. He is a good deal of a man, and he is a good deal of a poet.

There is nothing of the practical man of affairs about Field. His wife says he only needs to have a little more money than he could spend to be entirely perfect. He is not in his work, or life, or character any drawing up to the rule. He is as he is, he works as he does, because his instincts and sense of fitness have led him into those ways. He is impatient of forms. Half his humor comes from his sense of the incongruity of some forms. In his work he disclaims the name of a poet, and in literary terms. He says that he does not know a "triolet" from an "iambic," and an "anapest" is an unknown god. Mr. Field is the friend of all sorts and conditions of men. About his house, in the little room opening off his drawing-room, which he calls his "den," are souvenirs of statesmen, and actors, and business men, and painters, and poets, and priests. Against the wall is the ax with which Mr. Gladstone used to cut down trees at Hawarden. On a shelf is the spotted wooden horse that Toole used to ride in the "Cafe Plum." Hanging up is the long pipe that Elihu Vedder used in the Union League Club's "smoke talk." Just above is a sketch of Sara Bernhardt made by Whistler, underneath which the actress has written: "It is charming and very well done."

On the other side is a sketch of Mrs. Modjeska done by herself.

Mrs. Modjeska is a dear friend of the Fields, as she is of all that crowd of clever men in Chicago, which Mr. Field has classified in his "Sharps and Flats" as the "Saints and Sinners' Club." A few years ago Field used their acquaintance with her to play one of the practical jokes for which he is famous. He wrote a poem, "The Wanderer," to which he signed the name of Helena Modjeska. It was published in the Daily News. Two or three days later Melville Stone, who was then editor of the News, wrote a letter to one of the New York papers, quoting this poem and doubting its authenticity. He said he knew Mrs. Modjeska, and he did not believe it expressed her habits of thought. He signed the letter "Veritas." The New York paper published the letter and it attracted considerable attention. Then Mr. Stone sent an interviewer about to the Saints and Sinners, and asked their opinion, as friends of Mrs. Modjeska. Gen. McClurg declared there was no doubt as to the authorship. Dr. David Swing said that he had known Mrs. Modjeska for several years and was acquainted with her habit of thought. It was certainly hers. Who but Modjeska could have written these lines:

"And as this shell upon the mountain height sang of the sea,
So I, leagues and leagues away,
So I ever, wandering where I may
Sing, O home, sing, O my home, of thee."

Mr. Stowe gave all opinions space, and after it was all over, long enough, Mr. Field put the poem into his own collection, as though the matter were not worth talking about.

No long ago one of Mr. Field's friends had a large and beautiful scrap book made, and sent it to him, asking him to fill it with odds and ends that had no value to himself and hand it back. It is almost filled with all sorts of things. Original MSS., many pages of "Sharps and Flats," portraits of Mr. Field of all descriptions. Fully a dozen original drawings by different artists, none of which look the least like the original. Mr. Field's inseparable companion is a fox terrier named Jessie Bartlett Davis, and she appears in many of the pictures. One, a caricature that has been published, which Mrs. Field thinks the best one ever made of her husband, represents him leaning his elbow upon a dejected bust of Horace, his long forefinger on his forehead, pondering upon "Me and Horace." Jessie, in the ruffles of Punch, is beside him.

One of Mr. Field's new books is a translation of Horace. He gets the there; but it causes the Saints and Sinners to laugh.

Last October when the Fellowship Club gave its dedicatory banquet, Mr. Field was introduced to Mr. Eugene Bissell, who said to him: "How do you do, Mr. Field," he said, "I have always had a desire to meet you. The large commercial interests."

"You are mistaken, I am Eugene Field."

"Oh yes, I've heard of you," the Governor said solemnly. "A reporter on one of the papers aren't you?"

Near the Governor's picture is a letter:

PENFIELD (Pa.), April, 1891.
Editor of Chicago News.—DEAR SIR: In an item in a recent paper I saw an allusion to Eugene Field in connection with Chicago News and would like to know more of him, and, if possible, see some of his writing. Hence this letter. If it is not asking too much, would you like to know if he is editor or correspondent? And if he is of the family of which David Dudley Field and Henry M. Field are honored representatives. If not too much trouble kindly reply. Most respectfully,

There are a good many letters. One from John M. Ballentyne, written during the Fields' European tour last year, beginning:

My Dear Eugene: Why in God's name do you come home?

There is one from "Lotty," the only daughter. Mr. Field declares that he is going to fill out the collection with one of his wife's love letters.

One of the best things in the book is the collection of requests for money that were sent to the Daily News office. Mr. Field says he used to do $25 worth of work to get $5. He is chronically improvident—what he keeps out of his income for personal expenditure is gone before dark of the day it comes in. He met Hamlin Garland on the street the other day, and proudly exhibited an ancient copper kettle. "Behold!" he said, "a man who once had $10."

This interesting collection is headed by a pen and ink Christmas card bearing a cross and illuminated text. It reads:

Dear Mr. Shackleford, will you please hand my envelope and its contents to Mr. Charles H. Dennis today. Wishing myself many happy returns of the same I remain as ever, your obliged friend and obedient servant, EUGENE FIELD.

Christmas Eve, 1888.

The next one is dated Washington's birthday, and contains the portrait of an epauletted gentleman, who looks as though he had smallpox. He is proudly referred to, by his maker, as "Field's Washington."

"Behold our country's honored son, The proud, immortal Washington; Oh, but for him where now would be A Shackleford to succor me? And where would be that faithful friend Who pleads with Shackleford to send A 'diner' by the bearer back? That I now send to worry Shack."

A third is a half-dozen bars of music headed:

EVENING HYMN.
Con Expression.

And bearing this refrain:
"Oh, Shackleford, if you would see
Your own true friend survive,
By this small boy send to me
A necessary 'five'—A-men."

Mr. Field has had much of his MS. bound in his favorite red ink, and has illustrated the poems in pen and ink. All the illustrations in his books are from his own suggestions. Looking at his quaint drawings, ten times more interesting to children than any finished work, one wonders why no enterprising publisher has brought out his child's verse re-illustrated by himself. Children would go wild over it. There is a wonderful "Flub-Dub Bird," in red and green and black ink, which stalks solemnly down margins. Mr. Field says that roses are the flowers he loves best. "You can tell the roses from the leaves, because the roses are red and the leaves are green." But there is life in his drawing. He once made a sketch of the back of Maj. Moses P. Handy's head, with his whiskers flowing out at the sides, and wrote under it: "Philadelphia, Pa." And if arrived at its destination at the earliest possible moment.

There are numbers of bulky books bound in red leather in the Field library. Three big volumes contain a collection of over three thousand war envelopes. His cabinets are loaded with odd and curious things brought abroad, jumbled in with souvenirs. The Bohemian glass goblet, which was his souvenir of the great Fellowship Club dinner in October, when a cardinal and a vice-president, and statesmen and newspaper-men, and diplomats and princes of commerce and grand seigniors sat by side with his great-grandmother's watch, with a Phyllis in a red petticoat smirking on the face. Here is a ginger jar that stood in the "Old Manse," the property of Mrs. Hawthorne; and a big silver ring set with garnets that was the wedding-ring of a German peasant.

Framed at one side is an old play bill announcing Peg Woffington. Mr. Field has been accused by a class of Chicagoans of making sport of the great city. He has, but he has a solemn and holy belief in its greatness. He has been again and again offered much larger salaries than he receives in Chicago, but he has thrown his lot with the West. He believes everything possible in Chicago. He means to bring out his new books there, and bring them out in a way that the East has never surpassed. His next book will be a book for book lovers, a book about books. His own special editions are marvels of daintiness. There were fourteen copies of "Trumpet and Drum" done on unsewed Japanese paper. These will have one of his own book plates (an engraving of his family coat-of-arms) pasted inside, and will be given to his dearest friends. Fourteen will not begin to go around, even among those "dearest friends," who have left their mark upon his home. Over the fire hangs a beautiful large line engraving of the great English actor, and underneath it is a picture of Field, from his friend, Henry Irving.

"The mails bring him expressions of friendship from all ages and social conditions. School girls, who tell him that they like his gentle and sympathetic way of speaking of women. The family life of the Fields is delightful. It is a happy house. Mrs. Field is a beautiful woman, with the face of a young girl and all the dainty modern ways.

What can a man ask more of the world than to be that a natural expression of himself is his occupation, and all the world is his friend.

A Former Student Describes Their Professional Life.

Mr. Bissell at His Desk a Scrupulously Polite and Orderly Man—The Curtain is Drawn Aside Now.

Specially Contributed to The Times.

Some one paid a most agreeable compliment to the whole world when he said of us all, "We are history." The statement is so flattering that we may be pardoned for wanting to hold it to be worthy of acceptance; and yet, to March 4, 1893, and to the days immediately following March 4, some one's agreeable compliment, some one's acceptable statement, does not seem to apply with its customary force. The pages of history which are devoted to these passing days seem to be filled with one name and with the current incidents in one great career. It seems that, in these passing days, each American is less apt to say, "We are history," and that all Americans are more willing to say, "He is history."

Perhaps it is not a bad idea to turn back and in the earlier pages of the continuous public history, to look for the same familiar name. At any rate I was so employed when the leaves fell apart at a period, about fourteen years ago, that was concerned with other careers of less happy presage. The familiar name was not there at all in the public history, but the man himself stood out the more distinctly—not a printed record of him, but a portrait; or, rather, as though a curtain had been drawn aside to afford a glimpse of the quiet lawyer and his environment.

THE CURTAIN IS DRAWN ASIDE NOW.

Up one flight, please, and then it's the first door on the left.

The flight of steps is on the outside of a building, the building is in Main street, Buffalo, and we, for the purpose of this brief visit, have gone back to the year 1879.

It is bitter weather in Buffalo at this season—this winter of 1879. Mind the ice on the steps and mind the railing. It's quite a journey, even to the second floor, and very much out of doors, isn't it? But this is the only way, if you want to get up to their law office—the office of Bass, Cleveland & Bissell.

Few much out of doors until we reach the landing. We have only to turn a knob, which is immediately at hand (the left hand), in order to find ourselves not less emphatically but more comfortably within doors.

We are in a large room, a notably long and spacious room, where calf-bound volumes are orderly rows confront each other from opposing walls. Not the greatest number of law books that we have ever seen in a private library—not that by any means; but rest assured that here are conflicts of authority upon every possible legal point, and that one may secure these volumes at the answer yes or the answer no, according to taste, in reply to almost any question one may have occasion to ask. So, then, the library may be fairly regarded as sufficient. It is so regarded by the two students, who, with increasing perplexity, read page after page, whenever there is not a pleading to be copied or a summons to be served. This statement, so far as it relates to one of those students, may be received with the greater confidence, inasmuch as it is made by the only person who is in a position to know.

The office is not of the bustling and commercial sort. It is distinctly serious and strictly professional. One has an apprehension of order of long and unmarred hours of scrupulous care work in its quiet atmosphere. There seems to be plenty of room and plenty of time here. Ah, well, that's partly because the senior partner is away. Poor Mr. Bass (Hon. Lyman K. Bass) is in Colorado for the sake of his health, and the students are now left to the French, say, keeping office hours that often measure the whole extent of the day. Probably they arrived before the students this morning; no doubt Mr. Bissell will, as usual, economize time by taking for luncheon a sandwich at his desk, while the students are spending an hour in some restaurant; and when the students take their departure this evening, perhaps both chiefs may remain "planted." How these chiefs may grow, being so securely planted!

Yale, carried away with him from New Haven enough esteem and good will to make an ample garment even for his gigantic figure. He was covered with honor—with the respect that sterling qualities had won—and (a rarer and perhaps more valuable distinction) the popularity that had come as the unsought reward of a truly amiable nature. It is a tradition at the college still that the heaviest man in Bissell's class, for all his bigness, had not a mean cubic inch in his body; and "Big Bissell's" smooth face, with its conciliatory expression, is just as agreeable and almost as agreeable as it was in the year of grace 1879 as it was in 1869.

But this comment is a mere commonplace—in Buffalo, at least. Every one knows that much about Mr. Bissell, and I am not to suppose for the mail. "You should so fold this sheet," he says, very persuasively and very considerably, "and you should so place the sheet in the envelope that the recipient on opening the envelope in the usual way will have his letter, not upside down or with its back turned, but right side up and facing him."

Could a postmaster-general be more scrupulous? If Mr. Bissell ever becomes Postmaster-General that law student will no doubt recall the incident and say it was prophetic.

Mr. Grover Cleveland is a lawyer's lawyer, so to speak, most thoroughly appreciated by the members of his own profession and with a strong following, especially among the younger men. You may hear them say that they'd rather try a case before him as referee than before any other member of the Buffalo Bar, and every lawyer knows how much that saying means. But again, it would be a mere commonplace—in Buffalo, at least—to assert that Mr. Cleveland has those admirable qualities which attract young men and lend weight to his opinions. Here is something not only more important, but infinitely more important.

You will notice that he is a very quiet man. His voice is seldom heard in the office, and he is apt to go and come without a word. Yet somehow this quiet man quietly makes his personality felt in a most unusual degree, and when he does speak there is a quality in his voice that stirs and attracts. This sort of thing, this attractive force of a strong personality, would be a tremendous advantage in public life if at any time he should happen to become politically prominent. These three things that one can't help noticing in the man—the reputation for good judgment, the sympathy for generous enthusiasm that makes friends in the younger set, and the personal magnetism—these three things in combination would equip him for a great career, but he seems to be quite content in this office at the top of a flight of ice-covered steps.

The curtain's down again—to my great regret, but I can't help it. I was hoping that H. W. Box or Porter Norton, from their office on the other side of the hall, or John George Milburn, or Ansley Wilcox, or S. S. Rogers, or, in fact, any one of the many who would come in to the old office again and again, and so make the man of the future talk.

And yet, after all, the interruption is characteristic, for it is rarely a characteristic of men who really lead that you want from them and of them more and more, and more than you can get at any one time.

THE CRINOLINE BABY.

Specially Contributed to The Times.

The crinoline baby is not really made of crinoline. She is just starch. But her little dress stands out so bravely that it is not overshadowed by her mamma's crinoline. She is one of the babies, at least all who can walk, are crinoline babies this year. And their little dresses are almost counterparts of those worn by grand-mamma when she was a baby—back in the twenties.

The prettiest crinoline baby dress, out of nearly thirty that were shown in a big show window, was of a very fine quality of diagonal gingham. It was designed for a little lady of three years. The neck was cut square, front and back, and the front of the dress hung free and full from a very deep smocking at the neck. The little gown had a short empire waist in the back and the dress skirt was shirred upon it. On each side of the bodice from the waist a big rosette of ribbon at the waist line. And from the back of the neck hung a many-looped bow of "baby" ribbon. The sleeves of the gown were short and consisted of two big puffs.

The crinoline baby in the puffed sleeves and the very full skirt. When laundered the little gown will be starched into old-time stiffness. The colors of the dress were golden-rod and blue. Another "crinoline" baby dress was of Oshash silk, grey striped, with pink waist. In this case a tiny starched and embroidered petticoat supplied the stiffness.

One or two of the little gowns had a soft whalebone in the hem. These were made of softest chaffie and had Empire waists, pointed necks and short puffed sleeves. Many of the little sleeves were just deep flounces set in the armholes.

Even crinolines cannot rob babyhood of its prettiness. The little tots, as they were "trying on" their crinoline gowns for mamma's approval before purchasing, looked as dainty and sweet as Dresden figures. The stiffness of the little skirts and the crisp-puffed sleeves gave a neatness in finish quite indescribable and a baby dignity very attractive to look upon.

The crinoline baby will be a pretty sight as she toddles along by the side of her full-skirted mamma.

New Arrival. What is the angel weeping about in the corner? St. Peter. That's Columbus. He has just seen a set of Wanamaker's stamps. [Life.]

To me there is no grander word in the whole dictionary of human experience than that of woman. The true woman is infinitely above the mere lady, as the term is generally understood. There is about her a breadth of character, a completeness of intellect, real culture, a large-heartedness, a moral and spiritual supremacy such as is not always the complement of the simple lady. The term woman is suggestive of all that is best, highest and noblest in our sex—the companion and helper of man; the true wife and mother; the scholar; the educated and intelligent thinker; and the noble Christian.

A person possessing polished manners, a good degree of familiarity with the customs and ways of society; some conversational ability; a store of small talk, even if intellectually shallow and frivolous, if fashionable, living simply to amuse and to be amused, is accepted by society generally as a lady. She doesn't do anything to shock your sense of propriety; she is always nice and proper; she has pleasant tricks of speech; is courteous, amiable, affable; is interested in the gossip of the day; knows all about the latest fashions; is authority in matters of dress and fashionable modes of entertaining; is familiar with all the latest crazes; can discuss the latest novels; and she is a social success. But the large-hearted, noble woman, seeking always the duty nearest her; beneficent in her charities; training her children for usefulness; encouraging her husband by her wise counsels, her judicious economy, and her hopefulness; who has never known life's larger meaning, nor the worth of effort and attainment. If our "ladies" were all noble women in the broadest meaning of the term, there would be a marvelous transformation in society. In the home and the world at large. There is no name that can be applied to her that means so much, none in which are inherent so many possibilities. Honor the name of woman, my sisters, and hold far above all titles, all pride of place and position the glory and beauty of gracious womanhood.

The East sends us a good many people suffering from rheumatism. It is one of the heritages of the terribly cold winters of that section. For acute rheumatism I found in an old number of the Quarterly Therapeutic Review the following alleged cure for the terrible malady. "For acute rheumatism mix equal quantities of olive oil or liniment saponis, applied externally to inflamed joints affected by acute rheumatism, affords instant relief, and having a pleasant odor its use is very agreeable." It is a simple remedy and well worth trying.

NOTES.

Baked Bananas.—Strip a narrow piece lengthwise from one edge of the bananas and bake one-half hour in a moderate oven. As soon as they are taken from the oven pour a very little lemon juice over them, sprinkle with powdered sugar and serve.

Lady Cakes.—Beat a quarter of a pound of butter to a cream. Add gradually one pound of sugar, beating all the while until very light; add three-quarters of a pound of flour and the whites of ten eggs beaten to a stiff, dry froth, alternately mixing well. Flavor with one-half a teaspoonful of bitter almond and one teaspoonful of rose water. Turn in a greased pan and bake one hour in a moderate oven.

It is generally supposed to be proper for the guests to begin eating their dinner as soon as served, but at dessert to wait until all are served. This, however, is one of the things that must be decided by the custom of the place in which one lives. It is considered proper, in many cases, for the hostess to be served first, and this is a very sensible custom. For often happens things are served that the guests have never seen before, and do not know how they should be handled.

Chicken Jelly: made without water.—Cut a chicken (a hen is better) as for fricassee. Put it in a double boiler, with an even teaspoonful of celery seed, covered closely and let it cook for five hours. Strain it through an ordinary strainer and leave it to stiffen. Remove all the fat, melt the jelly, add salt to taste, and strain it through two thicknesses of cheese cloth. The quantity will be about half a pint. An excellent broth is made by adding three tablespoonfuls of boiling water to one of the jelly.

Steamed Batter Pudding.—Beat two eggs, broken without separating, until light. Add one cup of milk, and when thoroughly mixed, add one cup of flour and beat until smooth and light; then add one teaspoonful of melted butter, half a teaspoonful of salt and beat again. Lastly add one heaping teaspoonful of baking powder and one-quarter of a pound of candied cherries, cut in halves and dotted. Stir quickly into the pudding and turn into a greased melon mold. Boil or steam continuously for two hours, and serve with foamy sauce.

The above notes I found in the current number of Table Talk, one of the most practical and suggestive of our modern home magazines. It is published in Philadelphia, and I always welcome it, feeling sure that each number will contain something helpful and of value to be acquired.

SUSAN SENSIBILE.

George Kennan, the well-known Siberian traveler, who has been ill for three weeks at his home, in Washington, of typho-malarial fever, is now convalescent.

It is recalled that the late Gen. Beauregard built the first cable railroad in this country. The road was constructed just after the war, and extended from the city of New Orleans to the suburbs of Carrollton.

THE EASTER BONNETS.

What Fashionable Women Will Wear Easter Sunday.

New Styles for All Tastes and Purposes—What a Private Importer Says—A Peep at Exclusive Paris Models.

Specially Contributed to The Times.

The importers and designers of feminine apparel say there is no counting on the toilet caprice of the American woman; also, that her perennial coquetry finds its most individual expression in her chapeau.

To fashion for the "American trade" has long been the study of several of the largest hat and bonnet houses of Paris.

These French importations for spring wear, largely influenced by the taste of American wholesale buyers who claim to know the wants of the American market, are already on the counters of all the great metropolitan shops. Indeed, Paris importers, like our magazine editors, prepare the "spring numbers" six months in advance. This is why, despite increased and rapid transit, that American styles en masse are always three or more months behind the latest prevailing in Paris. What European women of fashion are now wearing in the sunny Riviera we shall see here later on.

Still, in our great cities there is an exclusive little inner world of modistes who have buyers in the Paris mart sending by every steamer the latest creations—not of general importance, but of certain masters. There are also a few autocratic dressmakers who import hats and bonnets for their patrons; and there is, at least in New York, more than one private milliner with her clientele who has no advertisement save the name in bonnet linings, makes only "to order," and whose "creations" express the best taste of women noted for artistic and individual dressing.

WHAT A PRIVATE IMPORTER SAYS.

The leaders of Gotham society are not copyists, and these private buyers of whom I speak are never sure that their Parisian masterpieces are going to find unequalled favor in the eyes of American beauty.

Returning home on a late ocean steamer, one of these exclusive importers confided her trials to an appreciative passenger.

"I have the very latest creations," she said, "things that Paris fashionists have not yet seen. My stock is the choicest and costliest, yet, despite my long experience, I can never rely upon my selections. The season is always full upon us before we can predict the drift of popularity."

"For one thing, you never can tell what an American woman may do with her bonnet. For instance, the crown of a Paris bonnet is made to fit the head comfortably, and the Parisian dresses her hair accordingly. But an American subjects her bonnet to any distortion that will fit it to the arrangement of her coiffure."

"In fact, the prevailing style of hair has much to do with the prevailing style of bonnet. At the present moment Parisians are wearing their bangs brushed high off the forehead—very trying but very distinctive—much waving with broad effect at the sides, and caught in a loose coil at the nape of the neck. That is the accepted coiffure. As it is new the coiffure shops are thronged. Two dollars is the price of a single waving. In the rush of a great social occasion I saw a woman pay $40 to have her hair waved.

"It is this uncovered forehead that is responsible this spring for the most radical of the departures in millinery. Hats are worn in Paris of the face, and face trimming of rosettes and flowers has come back in all its glory. However, face trimming is always becoming. Now, to wear these Paris creations properly, American women will have to adopt the Paris coiffure. Otherwise we will be forced," added the importer with a heart-breaking sigh, "to modify the shapes."

HIGH COLORED STRAWS WILL BE POPULAR.

A glance through the wholesale houses and dry goods stores recognizes the reign of straw—in form and color wonderful to behold. A higher key of color is the striking feature of Easter millinery everywhere, in texture as well as in color.

Brightness, lightness, carnival is suggested by the array of untrimmed hats. Manilla and Tuscan braids reproduce in color the sheen of the iridescent silks and velvets. The "rag carpet" effects of the winter silks and velvets are lowered out. Two, often three, distinct colors, distinctly treated, appear in one hat structure. There are yellow crowns and black rims, solid or broken with yellow braids. There are similar hats of black and green. A whole symphony of violet shades is often seen in the braids of a hat. Then there are hats of solid black, white, violet or yellow, with the inside of the rims dyed a contrasting color. Manilla is prominent. In short, every tint suggestive of home-dyed Easter eggs reveals on the shop counters among the straws.

There are many velvet or jet crowns for straws; for example, a pink velvet crown with a black chip rim broken by braids of pink chip, with a pink chip facing.

Bonnets are small. Hats are medium, with an occasional prominent Gainsborough; also there are many pokes, although exclusive shops are trying to exclude them.

For straight rims will be worn, and the sailor hat has practically disappeared—to be revived, probably, as the season advances.

The trimmed hats are denoted front, back or sides—sometimes the rim is a circle of dentures; they seem to be secured by crushing the rim in the fingers at haphazard.

THE BUTTERFLY TOQUE.

Light sage-green straw composes the crown of the Susanne. It is encircled by a soft fold of emerald velvet and garlanded with bunches of wood violets rich in buds and leaves. The broad, soft, fluffy, irregular velvet rim drops on the side in veritable velvet "ears," held in place by huge cut jet earrings with long globular pendants. A black pompon rises from the violets in front.

OTHER FANCIFUL HEADWEAR.

Fancy runs riot in the "Picture hat." Begun, Street, Cupid, Lloyd and the Dragon fly toque while the veil hat is as sensible as possible. The "Picture hat," with its handsome plumes, fares in front revealing a rich, yellow lining, a darker fold about the edge. The rim runs spirally around the hat, until at the back it seems to form a second rim, drooping low over the hair. Between the rim is laid a rich garland of English primroses which extends around to the front center of the hat, forming a face trimming on the left side.

Curving tabs of leghorn at the side constitute the Begun's peculiarity. The crown is green velvet, extending at the back into green velvet butterfly wings outlined with gold braids. Wired black lace wings and Parma violets at the front blend richly with the gold and green and straw of crown and rim.

The Dragon fly toque has a low crown of open jet. The wings, which make the crown of the wearer's head, reflect a thousand dull, metallic tints. The long antennae are jet, studded with diamond-like jewels. A halo of filmy white lace lies out on the hair when worn.

The Cupid is a low black straw with green velvet band and ribbons. Old lace falls over the rim. The white dove's wings are caught fast by ornaments of jet and emerald.

The Ceres toque consists of a huge bow of cherry velvet in front of a small crown of yellow grass straw. Heads of yellow grain, with green leaves rising from the velvet, and a fringe of amber beads falls at the back.

The slipper bonnet is very beautiful when worn. It is of gold fancy straw, its edges woven in rosettes. The slight band which further accents its outlines and the rich bow are of reseda mirror velvet. A green algrette and two pink rosettes spring from the bow, and two curious little jet horns form the front. The tabs are finished with jet "earrings."

The crown of the veil hat is nearly concealed by its band of Irish point lace, and there are bows of black satin ribbon at one side. A black Brussels veil is laid on the broad brim, gathered into rosettes at intervals, and falls in front to be gathered again at the back in a loose knot with flying ends. The veil is thus always raised and requires no adjustment beyond a gentle pull up or pull down.

The black straw poke has three narrow bands of green velvet laid on the rim. There is a cluster of black tips, and it ties under the chin with green velvet.

The Lloyd—named after its first purchaser—is about the size of a dime. Black jet pendants fall from the flat jet crown, and a lace butterfly rises in front.

In lieu of actress patrons any acknowledged society woman first to purchase a novel shape, may have it christened with her name.

THE 400 DO NOT ASK PRICES.

The prices of "imported hats" carried by leading dry goods houses are scarcely less extravagant than those of the exclusive modistes, while the untrimmed hats and bonnets of the trade range from $1 to $3.

But one looks in vain in the hats pictured here for the price mark. Patrons of such luxuries never vulgarize the transaction by asking the cost until the selection has been made.

"Good form" waits the home-coming of the precious bow and madame's billet-doux.

Happily Dame Fashion generously provides this season, not only for all phases of beauty and age, but something within the reach of the humblest purses.

AN AMERICAN NIGHTINGALE.

Miss Bigelow, the Remarkable Chicago Sifneuse.

She Whistles Gounod, Bach and Beethoven for the Parisians—Her Portrait in the Salon—A "King's Daughter."

Specially Contributed to The Times.

The Post from Chicago brings weekly to us in Paris many things to wonder at and to admire in prospect, and if the news is to be trusted, the Lake City is indeed what the English call a "Bouncer." But the best thing we know of Chicago—that town does not at present hold its own particular nightingale.

Without an exception everybody who hears Miss Grace Frances Bigelow of Chicago whistle says the same thing: "She is a human nightingale."

Miss Bigelow can warble like a thrush and a lark and a linnet, so that it would seem equally suitable to tack any of these birds' names to her own; but invariably the praise given her is that she is a "nightingale."

American newspapers, both of Boston and the Eastern cities, must already have made everybody familiar with her name and fame and face, since from a child she has been locally known as a thrush, and when she grew to girlhood and began study in the Boston Conservatory, her talent was no sooner known than it was called to serve the various needs of concerts for the poor or maimed and grave old professors and scientists would come to listen to her warblings. But in the French critics say the young sifneuse has a wonderfully flattering future before her if she chooses to avail herself of the opportunities that Paris offers. They have no need to wonder for her whistling from Gounod. As soon as one listens to three bars the ear is convinced of the presence of a rare organ under the control of a carefully educated musician. One great artist who heard her last week said that her caroling was new to his experience, and that he knows now that "whistling is the music of joy." But equally the whistle conveys the very essence of sadness. She whistles Gounod and Schubert, the "Traumbild" of Schumann, the waltzes of Chopin, and Bach, and Beethoven and Mendelssohn. One cannot describe the exquisite expression and shaded tones in her performance. The charm of the whistling is that it is intellectual whistling.

It is an amusement to look at one listening to Miss Bigelow for the time. One reads in the new face, the preparation had been made to be entertained, perhaps, "but never for enchantment like this."

Greig's "Sunshine Song" is a favorite here in Paris, and "The Nightingale" is often begged to give it three times running. The new face will give a pleased look of settled calm to the face of an already delighted audience. It will be news to many Americans, who have voted "The Mocking Bird" as roccoco, that the Parisians are delighted with it.

Miss Bigelow does not give any scientific explanations of her whistling power, though she has taught singers and whistlers to trill. She whistles with the utmost ease, the music flows from the gathered mouth freely and without apparent effort. The young lady smiles over the word "whistling," as applied to the music she whistles, but the list is a long one. A late addition is a "Scherzade," being a group of songs composed or sung by members of the Sheridan family. This she whistled a few weeks ago in honor of Lady Dufferin and Avon, the wife of the British Ambassador at Paris, on the occasion of the reading of a manuscript concerning Lady Dufferin's work in the Zenona mission in India.

A KING'S DAUGHTER.

Except for two or three charities, Miss Bigelow has not performed among the "American colony" here. She prefers to be known to the distinctly French of Paris; besides that, she is a serious student of her art, and wastes her time by "being in evidence" at the afternoon teas of fashionable people here, who can do her no good whatever, and the eclat of whose salons is not sufficient remuneration for the loss of time and cost of cab fare and gloves, for, with a great deal of being seen in "glory" that the so-called society people in the American colony generally pay their "artists."

For the poor, or sick, or blind, or lame, Miss Bigelow will give her time and talent, wishing always to make good her word of being seen in the "King's Daughters"; but other people must, so the young lady sensibly lays down the rule—pay for her time.

NEW FRENCH BREAKFAST JACKET.

Specially Contributed to The Times.

On occasion no one can go farther toward simplicity than your great French dressmaker. Here, for instance, is the latest idea of Felix for a breakfast jacket.

A straight yoke, reaching below the armholes, with a very deep shawl collar, plaited down to, coming down a little way below the belt and hanging loose. Only this and nothing more.

It was carried out in flannel, with a chamalo colored yoke and white plaiting; also in red and white. The sleeves were straight and full and gathered into loose bands of the color. It makes a very convenient little garment for her coffee.

The latest morning or chamber wrappers were of plain flannel and confined at the waist with a heavy, fringed cord and into knots and ties ended in frayed. Sometimes there is a hood, sometimes triple shoulder capes. The capes are divided up the back and the edges are fancifully buttonholed. A pretty material used for wrappers is a very crinkly wool with threads of silk run through, being irregularly, as I have seen, draped with effectively for combining two colors or tints, the second one being used as ruffle linings. Tue ruffles are pinked together. Thus plum color is lined with pale heliotrope; electric blue with a pale tint of the same; dark green with pale green, and so on. The result is very simple and pretty. Matinee jackets with these ruffles are laid in tucks down the back and front.

NEW FRENCH BREAKFAST JACKET.

JACK RABBIT.
A little jack rabbit lived out on the plains.
A gay little fellow was he,
And hipperly hop he went over the way,
As happy as happy could be.

And off he would stop on his way as he went,
And turn his head back on the sly,
As if he would say "catch me if you can,
We'll have fun if only you'll try."

The squirrels peeped out from their holes
As he passed,
And gaily the crickets did sing,
And the busy black spider did pause in his task.

The sparrow just folded his wing,
Like silver the pearly dew sparkled and shone
On each bush and blossom and tree,
And little jack rabbit was glad in his heart,
As by one look in his face you could see.

"But, dear me!" he exclaimed, "I must
"holter no more."
"And dear Mrs. Rabbit was there,
With dress smoothed so neat, each hair in its place
With no thought of sorrow or care.

But pop went the gun; a bullet sped swift,
And poor Jack was just in its way.
It reached his brave heart, he quivering fell
And there dead by his home he did lay.

Talks With the Children.
We have had some talks about the trees and flowers, and have learned what a wonderful thing growth is, that it does not take place by chance, but that everything is prepared for it, and that all the time nature is busy at her work. And now I would like to tell you something about the work which the roots of plants and trees have to do, for though hidden in the earth they are never idle, and as long as the plant or tree lives to which they are attached they must do their part toward sustaining its life and vigor.

If you should put a little seed in the ground, when it sprouted it would not all grow upward toward the cheerful sunlight. A part of the seed, that which is meant for the future stalk of the plant, or the trunk of the tree, would grow straight upward toward the light, while the other part, which is meant to form the roots, would thrust itself downward into the ground, pushing aside so noiselessly the small particles of soil in its way until it was far enough down to give it the strength needed for support. Do you wonder why the roots thrust themselves downward so naturally into the earth? Let me tell you.

The plant must have something to eat, something to nourish it and give it strength to grow, and most of the food for the plant is hidden in the earth, and tiny moths are found in the roots whose business it is to draw up the food from the earth and give it to the plant. If you take a microscope and examine the roots you will find these numerous mouths in the delicate fibers of the root, and they are as necessary to the life of the plant as your mouth is to your life, and these many mouths suck up the sap from the earth, which goes circling through the trees and the plants, feeding them so that they grow and are full of life and beauty.

And it is with the plants as it is with us—they do not all like the same kinds of food, and the roots of the plants feed them the food they need. That is why the roots of the plants are so important. They are the life of the plant, and without them the plant would die. So you see, the roots of the plants are very important, and we should be careful not to hurt them. Let us all try to be good to the plants, and we will have a beautiful world to live in.

It is all very wonderful how they always take the kind of food they need, never making any mistake. You never see anything which is half rose and half lily as you would if they got their food mixed and ate that which was not intended for their use. How they know just what to choose we cannot explain, but the wisdom of the very great, which makes these little roots know just what kind of food to draw out from the soil.

But there are some things that live without roots and which steal their nourishment from other growing things. I have seen here in California woods that eat the roots of the trees, and which live for hundreds of years from whose branches great quantities of gray moss hang, like long, swaying curtains, and much lighter in color than the leaves of the trees to which it clung. This moss feeds upon the sap of the tree, and it is full of thorns, which are found at the point where it clings to the tree, and they are forever busy in drawing their nourishment from it. This does not seem to impoverish the trees at all, for I have seen some curtains with moss which had great massive trunks and spreading branches, whose circumference was more than a hundred feet, and the trees were more than a century old. There are some in the Montecito, near Santa Barbara, which were thirty young trees when the old mission was built, and they must have heard the first editions of old mission bells, and their leaves have dropped their shadows upon the heads of the Indians who lived there when the mission was built, and before the homes of the white men were built in that beautiful valley.

How many stories of the past these old trees could tell us if they only had speech that we could understand. But from them, as well as from everything else that grows, we may learn lessons of wisdom if we will but study them. Do not let us be content with saying that a thing grows, but let us learn, as well as we can, its habits and its manner of growth and its various uses.

I have received the following from the kind friend who is the owner of "Polly," the wise hen of which you have heard before. She writes:

"My dear Mrs. Ote: I must tell you how Polly celebrated Washington's birthday. She came off this morning with eleven little chicks. After she dismissed her last family she came to the window and wished to come in. I opened the door, and instead of going to the wood box where she had been before she went to my room and laid an egg. Every morning I spread a white cloth on the bed and put on an egg (one of her own) and she would lay one exactly like the sample.

During those rainy days she would come in without stopping to wipe her feet. Then I would make her stand in a dish of water till they were clean. After she had laid 275 eggs she told me that she would like to rear another family. So I took an old pan, put in a few pieces of cloth to make it soft, then folded a grain sack and laid it in the pan and put in thirteen of her own eggs. Then I put the pan in a store-room on the back piazza. If any of my friends wished to see Polly I would take up the pan and carry it wherever it pleased without disturbing her in the least. But I am sorry to say, that with all my care in bringing her up she is a very selfish hen. One day I put out a dish of food for the hens, and she would eat as fast as she could and drive all the others away. Then I divided it and put half in another dish; but she did not like that arrangement, and would go from one dish to the other, and didn't seem willing that any of the hens should have anything to eat, but wanted it all herself. I told her a great many times that it was very selfish for her to do so, but she did not care for anything I said to her. I have never spoken her by letting her have her own way all her life.

But "Polly" has a good quality of which my friends does not speak. She is very generous in one respect—she lays the biggest kind of large eggs. I have seen some which were about the size of a turkey's egg, and it looks a good deal as if she were conscious of her selfishness in the matter of eating, and would like to atone for it in this way. We say of people, "We all have our faults," and it would be strange indeed if so wise a hen as "Polly" was without any. E. A. O.

THE CHICAGO EXPOSITION.

What a Great Novelist Says of the World's Fair Buildings.

His Plea That They Be Reproduced in Imperishable Materials—The Buildings Grouped for Permanent Beauty.

Special Correspondence of The Times.

The first impression of the great grouping and extent of the exposition buildings—and perhaps the only one that is likely to last, is that of a dream of overwhelming magnitude, compass and depth, relieved again and again by central points of real and intrinsic beauty; and when the mind, still fresh from the first dazzling view, turns inward and recalls the vision, the impression that the well-remembered images are but pictures out of dreamland is stronger than ever.

Mankind has assuredly not often had the good fortune to evoke from nothingness a beautiful phantom city, fixing it for a few short months in such form and by such material as shall give the memory of it a reality greater than its own.

From time to time, in the world's history, in the record of arts and architecture, some one man has conceived a building of surpassing grandeur; once in a hundred of those few times, some man or body of men, in love with art or with country, or with some ideal, have given shape and permanence to the conception. The Pantheon, the great temple at Pæstum, the Church of St. Sophia, Westminster Abbey, the cathedral of Cologne—strange, rarest, greatest, worst, and the best of the world's art—stand as records of such individuals or such bodies; monuments, some perfect, some gigantic, some fantastic, but all great, and all representing the strongest expression of human genius, feeling and power.

The buildings are scattered at great distances over the face of the earth—rare instances of man's noble success or superb failure in comparing himself in skill and device and strength with universal nature. The contemplation of each of them separately leaves something behind. The study of each of them, with all to which study leads, would be in itself an education; the longing to see them side by side in positive comparison has visited many lovers of the beautiful; this longing is, I think, even stronger than the desire to see the best of the world's art.

That, indeed, would be a "World's Fair." That, indeed, would show men what men have felt and thought and done upon the lines of beauty, under the greatest impulses which human endeavor can give. The study of each of them, with all to which study leads, would be in itself an education; the longing to see them side by side in positive comparison has visited many lovers of the beautiful; this longing is, I think, even stronger than the desire to see the best of the world's art.

spotless white—nature's reality in all its magnitude and the artist's dream in all its purity, brought-face to face.

What matter if the one were very real indeed—the other the most passing and fragile of fancies? In thought, in the reality of consciousness, the truths were brought together and were harmonious as they were meant to be from the beginning. What matter if the portico be but a moulded shell of wood and plaster, looking down upon the inland sea whose waves shall wash away the footprints of a million generations of men?

THE BUILDINGS GROUPED FOR PERMANENT BEAUTY.

One of the points by which I am most struck is certainly the wonderful taste and knowledge of effect shown in the relative position and placing of the greater buildings.

They are not crowded one upon another; no one of them cuts off the view of its neighbor to such an extent as in any way to injure the general effect.

In reality, the most central part of a very great city has been conceived and laid out, and built up, with all due regard and consideration for permanent beauty, as well as for the inevitable necessities of traffic by which the topography of great cities is governed.

QUESTIONS FOR CHICAGO TO ANSWER.

Few men, I think, can leave the future scene of the great exhibition without wishing that the buildings and streets and the approaches might, in great part, be made permanent, that the water might never ebb from the lagoons and canals; that the lovely portico might forever face the lovely lake, and that the noble Art building might be the center of it in beauty—and of a country of which that city should be worthy in greatness.

Why should this, or some part of this, be beyond the bounds of possible realization? Or is it wrong to dream that the vast sums of money which might be given, and constantly are given, for the sake of practical ethics, for charity, for education, for government, might, in part, at least, be devoted to the creation of a monumental work as nearly perfect and imperishable as man can produce?

Something of this kind is certainly to be done in the future, possibly before many years have elapsed. Why should it not be done, or at least thought of and decided upon, even before these cardboard palaces shall have crumbled under wind and sun and weather, or shall have been torn down when they shall have served the transitory purposes of their present existence?

Among many of the elements of success Chicago seems to have much of the will and all the power to realize the impossible, as well as the determination to be first in everything, at any cost. Why, then, should not her tens of millions cast in stone and marble be what her millions build in wood and plaster? Why should this be a dream only, and not the first step to a fact stupendous in itself, enduring as anything can be, and beautiful as man can make it?

CHICAGO CAN DO AS MUCH AS ATHENS.

Standing before the building which has been erected to the arts, I was forcibly reminded of one of the great modern feats of architecture which I have often seen and dearly love. I mean the marble University Library and Museum of Athens. The noble and self-sacrificing effort, have expressed, urbis et orbis, their deep-seated and reverent ancestor worship. They did not try to do everything themselves, though they paid for everything. They employed the highest skill that money could command, and the most durable and beautiful materials that wealth could buy, and they have produced something which has as good a chance and as good a right to live as the Parthenon, the Erechtheum, or the temple of the Wingless Victory. It will be strange indeed if in the long run poor Athens should have conceived and accomplished what million-making Chicago does not even contemplate. Shall we make a new proverb, or a new version of the scripture and say: "He who hath shall do nothing, and he who hath not shall do even that which is impossible?"

I have heard it said that men of surpassing genius have sometimes in their sleep dreamed their greatest works. The image of one of the greatest dreams of the world is hovering like a vision upon the mountains of Lake Michigan. We see it but indistinctly, perhaps as dreams are seen, not rounded as a whole nor absolutely perfect in detail. It is that fleeting grace which belongs rather to visions than to reality. It must fade and vanish before long like the most hallucination of the night. But it has passed before us and is yet within the sphere of our vision; it has yet the momentary embodiment, which is all the thought requires in order to fix itself upon our memory.

Let us, then, look forward with even a little certainty to the materialization of even some small portion of what has been so temptingly reflected upon earth and air and water.

But anticipation is one thing, hope is quite another. Let us hope, then, even against the probability; let us pay to the gentle deities of the monetary; let us offer incense and votive sacrifice in her temple; and so go on hoping so long as the love of beauty has life that it may take shape and permanence and come down from on high and dwell among us.

"Ours is thoroughly revised to date."

"We thank THE TIMES very much for buying this library at wholesale for us, as otherwise we should have to do without it, or buy it from a book store, and when you buy at the book store you have to pay the full price and cash, while THE TIMES gives a whole year or more to pay for it."

HERE IS THEIR WONDERFUL PROPOSITION.

Send one dollar to THE TIMES (E. B. DePb) for one volume, which will be sent to you, charges paid. The remaining 24 volumes can be obtained on the easy payment plan of TEN CENTS A DAY ($3.00 per month). These easy terms will give you this great Reference Library at only $1.96 per volume, which is less than one-fourth the price of the English edition.

BOXERS AND BOXING

Leading Amateurs of New York City.

Men Who Can Hold Their Own With Professionals.

Some of the Things Which Occasionally Occur.

A Case Where a Couple of Friends Fought to a Standstill—Some Scientific Sparring Contests.

Special Correspondence of The Times.

New York, March 12.—There used to be three classes of boxers, the professionals, who fought openly and avowedly for money; the amateur, who sparred for glory, exercise and fun, and the self-styled "amachooers," who fought, or often "faked" for whatever they could get, cash of course, preferred. Within the last year, however, the "amachooer" has almost disappeared from the ring. Clubs which used to encourage boxing wearied of offering gold watches, medals in the form of chunks of gold, and other such trophies readily converted into dollars, for the questionable privilege of seeing several pairs of "amachooers" make holes in the air for a limited number of rounds in efforts to avoid hitting each other.

James Motley.

The clubs decided it was better to pay a little more and have genuine contests between out and out professionals.

The Amateur Athletic Union, which has control of amateur boxing in the United States was anxious to drive from the amateur ranks the unworthy "pugs" who sold or pawned their prizes as soon as won, or accepted money outright. The greatest difficulty, however, was experienced in securing the proof required to convict of professionalism. When placed on trial the boxers with many oaths attested their innocence, and as the A.A.U. had no power to subpoena unwilling witnesses, the examinations became mere farces.

Finally the union determined to put the burden of proof on the shoulders of the suspected boxers. Last April every man who had competed at a tournament for several months previous was suspended from the amateur ranks. More than three hundred thus came under the ban. They were informed that the union would be only too happy to reinstate them as soon as they would prove their amateur standing. The proof demanded was an exhibit of medals won in competition. The union might as well have asked for an exhibit of all the money they had ever earned or seen. With a few exceptions the whole crowd was forced into the professional class, where it really belonged.

It was undoubtedly the presence of this undesirable element in the amateur ranks that brought boxing in public into disrepute among genuine amateurs. As a matter of fact there is no more reason why two gentlemen should not meet in a scientific sparring contest than in the rush-line on the football field. However, real amateur sparring is practiced, nowadays, almost altogether in the seclusion of the club's boxing-room. The bouts are invariably good-natured. But how some of these amateurs punch!

In the New York Athletic Club, for instance, there are a dozen men who can strike blows that would do credit to a professional. They are just as clever, too, in landing the blows where they will do most good, or rather most harm. For years the N.Y.A.C. had a corner in the only club, probably, that could turn out more than a limited number of clever boxers. Another reason for the superiority of the boxers who wear the "Mercury foot" is the excellence of the instruction afforded. "Mike" Donovan and his assistant, "Denny" Butler, are two of the best instructors in the country. Their class numbers close to 150, including athletes who have become famous in other branches of sport, artists, lawyers and business men.

The foremost boxer in the club—the best amateur in America, for that matter—is Charles Coster, formerly captain of the N.Y.A.C. Coster took his first lesson from Donovan nearly nine years ago. He was then a light middleweight. He strips today at 175 pounds, though he looks fifteen pounds lighter in his ordinary suit. He still spars frequently with his old instructor, but is now quite out of the veteran's control. His arms are long and he uses his shoulders in hitting in a manner that gives him an unusual reach. He is so hard that blows, unless delivered with great force, do not hurt him. His defense, moreover, is almost perfect.

Mr. Coster's strongest offensive point lies in his cross counters. In the use of his right hand he is probably not excelled by any heavyweight boxer living. He is wonderfully quick, as clever as Donovan himself, and an excellent judge of time and distance. A friend of Mr. Coster, who knew that he sparred, though not how well, once played what he thought would be a funny trick. He induced a well known professional pugilist to come to the Seventh Regiment gymnasium, expecting to "ring him in" on the amateur. A number of the militiamen, who had been "let in" gathered to see the fun. Coster was asked to put on the gloves with the stranger and consented. He did not see through the scheme until he just escaped a blow that might have knocked him out. A minute later they were reviving the professional under a shower bath.

Mr. Coster is a well-known grain broker, but very few of his associates on the Produce Exchange know that he could, if necessary, put up a good fight against even James J. Corbett.

Fred Winthrop, the champion middle and heavyweight boxer of the University, also learned what he knows of sparring at the New York Athletic Club. Before Corbett made his match with Sullivan, the Californian occasionally visited the club's boxing-room, where he helped out the club's instructor.

In a careless moment he gave Winthrop with whom he was sparring an opening, and the student landed what was probably the heaviest blow on Corbett's chin the champion ever received. "He hit like a mule kicking," was Corbett's comment after the bout.

Besides being an unusually hard hitter, Winthrop is very clever. He is a quick dodger, and has a very peculiar body twist that enables him to avoid many hard body blows.

Robert A. Center is as good a boxer as he is a sailor and that is saying a great deal. Before his departure for Japan last summer, Center was as scientific an amateur as there is in New York city. He is not a heavy hitter, but is quick and active as a cat. His defense is particularly good. I saw him spar once with his right hand injured too much to deliver hard punches. To the end of rather a long bout, however, he kept his opponent off by the cleverest kind of dodging, parrying and straight countering. Center strips at about one hundred and thirty-eight pounds.

James Motley has the reputation—and he deserves it—of being the best amateur lightweight in New York. Though weighing not more than 132 pounds, he has the shoulders and arms of a middleweight. For so small a man, his hitting powers are phenomenal. Mr. Motley injured his wrist some time ago, and was not able to practice much until the beginning of this season. Like all good lightweights, Motley is very quick, which, with his unusual strength, would make him a dangerous fighter if necessity required.

George R. Schwieger, George R. Gray and E. J. Gianinni are better known for their performances in hurdling, shotputting and rowing, each being a champion in the game he makes his specialty. That they are not known as boxers, as well, is due to the fact that they have never shown in public how well they can use their fists.

Schwieger, who could train down to fight as a heavy lightweight, is the most clever of the trio. He is unusually quick on his feet, full of tricks and very strong. His practice in shotputting has given him a strength and a quickness in pushing out his hand that makes it a dangerous object to encounter, even when there is a big glove on it. Gray strips at 190 pounds. His weight, strength and agility would enable him to hold his own in almost any company. When he lands a blow, the victim feels as though he had been hit with a sledge hammer. He found, too, that his right arm was numb and lifeless. He stumbled like a drunken man. They sat him on a chair and sent for brandy and three doctors. In the meantime Billy "went out" altogether. And maybe it wasn't a frightened lot that looked on.

The shower bath revived him in a few minutes, and he came around none the worse for his experience. An hour later Billy and Jack were engaged in a heated discussion as to which blow it was that put Billy out.

But it was weeks before either learned the secret of the other's earnestness on that particular night.

the men were getting ready for the boxing-room he spoke to them separately.

"Say Billy," he said, "don't say anything, but look out. Jack has given it out that he is going to lay you out."

"Oh! he is, is he? Well we'll see," replied Billy.

Then "Davy" went to "Jack." "You want to be careful tonight," he confidentially whispered. "Billy has given it out that he's going to lay you out."

Jack, who was just about to put on his shirt dropped it and went into the boxing-room stripped to the waist. "That looks like business," was Billy's comment to himself as he also removed his jersey.

They went at each other very fast. No one of the crowd that gathered to see the fun had thought of arranging any of the formalities of timing or refereeing. Neither of the men wanted to be the first to say "hold, enough," so they banged each other for fifteen consecutive minutes. Then there was a mutual cessation of hostilities, for the men could hardly stand.

After a rest, they went at it again, agreeing however, to stop at the end of five minutes. Each thought, of course, that the other was "out for blood." When time was nearly up, "Billy" sent Jack's head flying back and Jack answered in kind. Just as time was called Jack got in an awful cross-counter on the left side of Billy's neck. The men clinched and fought in, until they were parted. Then they shook hands and started for the hat room.

When Billy tried to speak a minute later, he found he couldn't. He found, too, that his right arm was numb and lifeless. He stumbled like a drunken man. They sat him on a chair and sent for brandy and three doctors. In the meantime Billy "went out" altogether. And maybe it wasn't a frightened lot that looked on.

East Whittier!

A good many lots have been sold in East Whittier in the last 30 days. All are to be improved. The acreage of lemons and oranges, mostly lemons, put out in the next sixty days will run up into the hundreds.

We have, without question, the finest location and soil for lemons of any locality in Southern California, Cahuenga not excepted, as we have plenty of water, while they have not.

We Have Some Fine 10-acre Tracts

Still on sale, though they are going rapidly and choice will soon be limited. Come out during February and make your selection and be ready for March putting in of trees. A lemon orchard started now will in five years produce a splendid income. There is no danger of over-production of lemons. California can not, as yet, supply her own demand—no danger of having to give them away during your lifetime.
